U. S. MAY SEND MEN TO NAVAL TRUCE SIGNING

Morrow Is Likely to Be One of Delegates if America Accepts.

CHANGES IN FIGURES WOULD NOT BE MADE

SENATOR DWIGHT MORROW.

(Associated Press.)

Acceptance by the United States of an invitation to be represented on a committee of the five principal naval powers signatory to the London naval agreement to draft the final form of the Franco-Italian settlement last night appeared likely.

Senator Dwight W. Morrow, of New Jersey, now en route to Europe with Mrs. Morrow, probably will be at least one of the American representatives if the United States accepts the invitation extended by the British government.

The senator, aside from Secretary Stimson himself, played a larger part than any other member of the American delegation to the London Naval Conference in drafting the London Treaty.

American participation in the work of the committee would not necessarily mean that the United States would sign the final draft.

Stimson States Belief.

For the first time since the British-Franco-Italian negotiations began, Secretary Stimson yesterday publicly indicated he believed it was not necessary for the United States to sign the accord. The Secretary added he could be converted to another belief, but observers were of the opinion that signature by the United States was highly unlikely.

The Secretary indicated he could see no reason why the United States should sign the accord because it related solely to Great Britain, France and Italy. The Japanese government concurs in the American viewpoint that the agreement can be made collateral to the London agreement, requiring nothing more from Japan and the United States than an expression of acceptability.

The proposed committee would not alter the figures agreed upon by France and Italy in their basis of settlement. It would concern itself only with the placing in final form of the agreement.

The British invitation for American participation was extended to the State Department in the form of a suggestion as to just how the basis of agreement between the two nations could be made a reality.

Question Under Consideration.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, discussed the question with department officials yesterday. Mr. Stimson has taken the question under consideration and it was believed he would accept.

The Secretary disclosed yesterday he had communicated some suggestions to the other powers regarding the settlement. These were based mainly on the assumption that it would not be necessary for the United States to sign.

In response to question, the Secretary expressed the belief press dispatches from London to the effect that it was felt there the United

HOOVER URGES CURB ON IMPORTS OF OIL

All Dealers Except One Reach Agreement; Proration Also Asked.

(Associated Press.)

Proration of domestic oil production and limitation of imports were looked to yesterday by President Hoover to solve the ills of the distressed petroleum industry.

The President made this known after Secretary Wilbur had announced American oil importers, with one exception, had agreed to limit the amount brought into the United States.

In a formal statement, President Hoover said limitation of imports would have little effect unless the recently developed pool in east Texas were prorated on the same basis as other new pools.

"It is believed," he added, "that if these two results could be brought about the industry will soon readjust itself."

President Hoover said he had been advised the Governor of Texas was making an effort to bring about proration for that pool. The Chief Executive, who initiated negotiations for limiting imports, added the Federal Oil Conservation Board believed a substantial reduction in the amount brought into this country "can be brought about without disturbing the price of oil to the consumer."

Secretary Wilbur, in announcing the agreement to curtail imports in line with proration restrictions here, said it would reduce the amount brought in several million barrels annually.

The agreement was announced by Secretary Wilbur, who said it would reduce imports several million barrels

$750,000 LOSS SEEN IN JEWEL STORE ROBBERY

MANAGER DECLARES GANG KIDNAPED HIM

Forced to Tell Combination of Safe, He Asserts, and Then Was Bound.

Palm Beach, Fla., March 13 (A.P.).—Robbers who had the key to the door and combination of the safe entered the Palm Beach branch of Charlton & Co., New York jewelers, last night, and escaped with loot estimated at $650,000 to $750,000. Some officials said the total might reach $1,000,000.

Otto Wegener, local manager and trusted employe of the firm for 20 years, told authorities he gave the key and combination to three of four men who kidnaped him last night and threatened his life unless he obeyed their commands.

No charges had been made tonight, but Sheriff R. C. Baker said Wegener and D. H. Odum, night watchman at the store, were being questioned. The sheriff said some details of Wegener's story varied.

Robbers Worked Quietly.

Diamonds and costly gems were said to have composed the bulk of the loot, which was quietly removed from the store in the shadow of the exclusive Everglades Club and palatial winter homes of the wealthy.

No exact check of the stolen jewelry had been made, but insurance men and company officials were preparing a detailed list. The first estimate was made by G. A. Peacock, New York member of the firm and Sheriff Baker said the loss might run lower or as high as $1,000,000.

Wegener told officers he was seized in front of his hotel in West Palm Beach by persons who called him "Otto." He was taken to a vacant house in southern West Palm Beach, where he was gagged and tied to the sink in a deserted kitchen, after being forced to give up the key and combination.

Held Prisoner by Gang.

The manager asserted he was held prisoner there until early this morning when his guard left for about 40 minutes when he managed to extricate himself and make a report to officers.

"We know you have a boy going to college and have something to live for," Wedener quoted one of the men saying to him. "You won't be harmed if you give us this combination."

He also told the sheriff the kidnapers returned some time during the night and related they had trouble with a watchman and had to hit him over the head.

The sheriff went to Odum's rooms and found him sleeping and unharmed. Odum told the sheriff the

Bottles Shown in Court Are Challenged by His Attorneys.

A jury of eight men and four women rendered the expected verdict in the District Supreme Court yesterday and acquitted former Representative Edward E. Denison (Republican), Illinois, of a charge of having used the privilege of freedom of the port to bring a trunk of liquor to Washington from Panama.

The jury took an hour to come to a decision and balloted several times. The first ballot showed seven jurors voting not guilty, three, one of whom was a woman, voting for a verdict of guilty and two reserving their vote.

The tide in favor of the defeated candidate for reelection never turned. The second ballot showed nine voting for a verdict of not guilty and three voting for one of guilty. The majority of the jury apparently did not believe that the mislabeled whisky

HUFF KIN HINT PLEA FOR DULANEY TRIAL

Relatives Consider Move in Spite of Grand Jury's Freeing of Killer.

Incensed because the District grand jury freed the slayer of their kinsman, the family of William Huff last night brooded over the twist of fate that exonerated Eurtha Ira Dulaney and strongly intimated that new legal action will be essayed to bring the killer to trial.

The strong sentiment of members of the grief-stricken family was clearly indicated last night to visitors at their modest home along the upper road at Hume Springs, close to Alexandria.

Only a few hours earlier in the afternoon the bullet-riddled body of Huff had been buried in a nearby cemetery with the mourners numbering the man's wife and their 6-year-old daughter, Mary, a second-year pupil at the Mount Vernon School in Del Ray, among several other members of the family.

Even though separated from Huff for almost four years, Mrs. Huff was deeply affected by the tragedy and

LIQUOR CONVENTION URGED ON CONGRESS

Massachusetts Legislature Takes Action to Modify or Repeal Law.

Boston, March 13 (A.P.).—The Massachusetts Legislature today called in the national Congress for a constitutional convention of the States to consider repeal or amendment of the prohibition amendment.

The action taken today was the concurrence by the House of Representatives in a Senate amendment to a resolution requesting such a convention. The amendment was accepted without debate and the resolution will be forwarded to Congress. Signature of Gov. Joseph B. Ely is unnecessary, but he expressed approval of the Legislature's action.

Massachusetts was believed at the State capital to be the first State to take advantage of the constitutional guarantee that two-thirds of the States can compel Congress to call a constitutional convention.

The Bay State resolution follows:

"Whereas, a condition of widespread dissatisfaction prevails with workings and results of article 18 of the

Mark of Altitude Reported Broken

Aviatrix Claims Ascent of 33,000 Feet From Akron Field.

Akron, Ohio, March 13 (A.P.).—Miss Frankie Renner, 30, business executive and airplane saleslady, took a day off from her regular routine today and piloted an airplane to an altitude which, she claimed, was much greater than any a woman has yet reached.

She estimated that her Waco biplane went to 33,000 feet, greater by 3,000 feet than the goal at which she aimed in order to break the official altitude record for women.

Miss Ruth Nichols has claimed to have gone 30,084.

Friday, Thirteenth, Spirit Trails Man

Victim of Auto Accidents Also Possesses Name of 13 Letters.

The diabolic fates that prevail on a Friday, the 13th, vented their wrath doubly strong on Daniel J. Curtin yesterday. He was riding his bicycle down Sixteenth street northwest when, at the corner of L, he was struck by an auto operated by Floyd Satterfield, of Fairfax, Va.

The motorist hoisted the 24-year-old cyclist into his car and headed for Emergency Hospital. They had scarcely got under way when Satterfield's auto collided with another driven by Harry S Mackerley, Tenth street near D northwest. Perseverance was served, however, and Curtin finally reached the hospital to be treated for a lacerated scalp.

With thirteen letters in Daniel J. Curtin, it was a temptation the alleged hoodoo could not resist.

BLAST AT HOME KILLS MAN AND BURNS ANOTHER

MARYLAND TEACHER BREATHES FLAMES

L. G. Claggett Dies, While J. S. Gingell Is Near Death at Hospital.

An explosion of a can of kerosene, being used to revive a dwindling fire in a Pooleville, Md., home, last night claimed the life of Lawrence G. Claggett, a teacher in the National Training School for Boys, and seriously burned J. Stanley Gingell, former deputy sheriff of Montgomery County.

Claggett, who was married less than a month ago and made his home at 3513 Thirteenth street northwest, died at the home of his uncle, Dr. E. W. White, of Pooleville. Gingell is near death at Emergency Hospital, suffering from serious burns.

In moments of consciousness, Gingell gasped out the story of the explosion. The two men were at the home of Claggett's mother at Pooleville, when Claggett lifted a can of kerosene to pour on the fire in the kitchen stove. The can exploded and ignited the men's clothing.

Fire Department Called.

Neighbors who heard the explosion rushed in after calling the Rockville Fire Department, and beat out the flames. Dr. White was called and ordered Claggett removed to his home, after concluding that he would not live more than a few hours.

Claggett's clothes were burned from his body. He had inhaled the flames, Dr. White said.

Gingell was placed in a private ambulance and the Rockville Fire Department opened a traffic lane for them in a speedy run of more than 30 miles from Poolesville.

Mother Is Summoned.

Gingell, 41 years old, and Claggett, 33 years old, had been friends for years. Claggett's mother, Mrs. Mary Claggett, who owned the Poolesville house, was summoned from Salisbury, Md., where she was stopping. Mary M. Claggett, a sister of the dead man, who lives at 2129 First street northwest, was notified of the accident, but was too late to reach his bedside.

Claggett was one of the original four men who comprised the Montgomery County Police Department when it was organized, in 1922. He resigned twice, once to work with a brother in Texas and the second time to join the staff of the National Training School, on Bladensburg road.

Gingell is a widower. His wife died six years ago. For fifteen years he was Deputy Sheriff of Montgomery County and went out of office five years ago. Since that time he has engaged in a private detective agency and had a furniture-renovating business in Rockville, where he lived.

Fire Chief W. V. Wilson of Rockville said that the damage to the house was slight.

F. D. ROOSEVELT BOOM GROWING AFTER PARLEY

CONDITIONAL BACKING IS GIVEN BY CARAWAY

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

The stock of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, right now the strongest candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1932, took a rise here yesterday in the wake of the Progressive conference of the day before.

It was boosted by statements made by three United States senators, all of them drys.

Favors Robinson.

"I am for Robinson," said Senator Caraway, "but if he can't get it, I am for Roosevelt."

That Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Caraway's colleague, and the Democratic leader of the Senate, can not be nominated is already conceded. Therefore, it may be assumed that Caraway is for Roosevelt, notwithstanding the fact that the governor is a wet.

Senator Cordell Hull (Democrat), of Tennessee, who himself is regarded as a presidential aspirant, but who is not believed to be unfriendly to Roosevelt, made an open bid for a Democratic-Progressive alliance in 1932. He praised the Progressive conference here, and stated that, in "numerous instances," the ideas expressed were in harmony with those of the rank and file of Democrats.

Norris to Oppose Hoover.

Senator George Norris (Republican), of Nebraska, who is regarded as the leader of the Progressives, said that the Progressives' only hope for a liberal presidential candidate lies in the Democratic party. He made it clear that he would again do as he did in 1928—oppose Herbert Hoover, whose nomination for a second term he concedes. If a Democrat like Owen D. Young is nominated by the Democratic party, Norris said, he will simply "go fishing." The Nebraskan, while he would not come out and indorse any Democratic candidate, is known to be a sincere admirer of Gov. Roosevelt, particularly because of the latter's views on electric power.

Senator Norris would not hold Roosevelt's views on prohibition against him. He thinks that prohibition is a "sham issue" anyway. To him the big thing is to smash the "power trust," and he thinks that the New York governor sees eye to eye with him on that.

Wheeler Approves.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, also put in a good word for Gov. Roosevelt yesterday.

Meanwhile Senator Dickinson (Republican), of Iowa, chairman of the recently created agricultural advisory council of the Republican national committee, issued a statement in which he said that the Progressive conference did not "create a single job for any workman in the United States" or "add a single cent to farm prices."

The conference, Senator Dickinson said, was "made up largely of supporters of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith in 1928."

Chiding the Progressives for failing to do anything more than order a study of the farm problem, Senator Dickinson said that the Republican administration has put into effect measures "which have been of great benefit to the farmers during this period of world depression."

Roosevelt Favored Elsewhere.

Senator Caraway is the first prominent Southern dry to come out, even conditionally, for Gov. Roosevelt. But he is not the first one to do so "off the record." Any number of South-

2 CHINESE WOUNDED; BROTHER IS ACCUSED

Alleged Attacker Charges Pair With Selling Him, Wife Into Slavery.

Two Chinese are near death in Casualty Hospital from hatchet wounds inflicted on their head allegedly by their brother, Lee New Young, who, he charges, sold his wife and him into slavery in China.

The brothers are Lem Ben Lee, 37, who conducts a laundry at Rhode Island avenue near Twenty-first street northeast, and Tom Bow Sing, 23. The victims say they are brothers of Young but deny the selling into slavery charge.

Early yesterday, Young, who is said to be a "hatchet man," crept into the room in which his brothers were sleeping, and inflicted wounds on them with a cleaver, they said. Lee broke away and called police. The wounded men told police that Young came to their house a few hours before and was given a bed for the night.

Young denied this and said he had been staying there for two months. He explained the difference in names by saying that they changed them to gain admittance to the country.

Plane Takes Antitoxin To Diphtheria Sufferers

Point Barrow, Alaska, March 13 (A.P.).—Bringing 500,000 units of antitoxin to battle a diphtheria epidemic in this little Arctic settlement, Pilot Joe Crosson arrived here by air today from Point Lay.

Four new cases of diphtheria had developed bringing the total to 21.

Mother, Ill, Drowns 2 Children and Self

Hurls Two Boys and Girl From Dock After Taking Them to See Boat; Oldest Lad Saved by Clutching Rock.

Mattapoisett, Mass., March 13 (A.P.).—Mrs. William Chester Allinson, 35, of Saylesville, R. I., drove her three children to a dock here tonight on the pretense of showing them the New York boat and then hurled them into the water and jumped to her death after them.

The tragic story was revealed by one of the children, Wayne, 11, after he was found dripping wet a mile from the place of the drowning in an exhausted condition. Nearly overcome with grief and from his efforts to reach safety from the near-frigid waters, the boy told how his mother had thrown him, his sister, Hope, 6, and his baby brother, De Witt, 3, from the edge of the dock.

Wrapped in bed at the home of Ralph Purrington, the boy told Constable Sylvester Savage of the tragedy. Police grappled several hours for the bodies. No trace of them had been found.

An automobile parked near the edge of the dock bore mute testimony to the truth of the boy's story, however.

Wayne said his mother had been ill for some time and frequently had "bad spells." Late today she told the children, he said, that she'd give them a treat and take them to see the New York boat. She drove the family car to Barstow's wharf here. All got out at the mother's direction and walked to the edge of the wharf. Each child was pushed in and the mother jumped after them, Wayne said.

The boy was unable to swim, but managed to cling to rocks beneath the wharf and then pulled himself ashore. The vicinity was deserted as he started to walk for help. The Purrington's found him on the street nearly exhausted and called the constable.

The husband and father, informed of the tragedy, left Saylesville to come here tonight. He was unaware of anything wrong or of the absence of his family until he returned from his employment at the Sayles Finishing Plant, where he is a chemist.

Friends of the family tonight said Mrs. Allinson had been despondent for the past several weeks.

British Statesman Passes Suddenly

Vernon Hartshorn, Friend of Welsh Miners, Seen as Influential Man.

Maestog, Wales, March 13 (A.P.).—Vernon Hartshorn, 59, who was a member of the Simon Commission to India and had been lord privy seal in the MacDonald government since 1930, died suddenly at his home here today with Mrs. Hartshorn at his side.

He worked in his London office all this week, coming home yesterday. He had arisen late this morning, and died a few minutes later, before a doctor could be called. He was a striking figure, widely known among the miners, for he had been president of the South Wales Miners Federation. The miners regarded him as a moderate, and his advice was valued both by the federation and by Parliament.

As postmaster general in the first MacDonald government and in his other official positions he was frequently praised for his "humanizing" policies.

Auth Cousins Held In Cab Driver Robbery

Young Capital Residents Freed in $1,000 Bail to Await Trial.

Two prominent young men were released in $1,000 bail each yesterday after being charged with assault and robbery after a story told by a taxicab driver that they "took him for a ride."

Those arrested are Laurence J. Auth, 25 years old and his cousin, Francis A. Auth, 22 years old, son of Anton A. Auth, general manager of the Auth Provision Co. Laurence was taken into custody early in the day and his cousin was charged later.

John R. West, 26 years old, of 943 K street northwest, said that he was badly beaten by the pair and robbed of $3. West bears no marks of the encounter. West said the sedan occupied by the Auth cousins trailed him from Fourteenth and H streets to Eleventh near I where the young men forced him into their car and drove him through the Monument Grounds, where he said he was forced to hand over his money.

Then, he said, he was taken in an alley near Thomas Circle and beaten and kicked. The taxicab driver phoned the number of the car to the police and the arrests followed.

Laurence Auth told an entirely different story. He said that the taxicab driver called them a vile name when they nearly collided at Fourteenth and H streets. They followed him to Twelfth and Ohio avenue, they said, and asked him who he meant by calling them such names.

The taxicab driver continued his abusive language, they said, and they pulled him from his cab and had a scuffle, then they put him in their own car and drove around the block.

They then tried to smooth things over, he said, and the taxicab driver offered them his money, which they threw back at him, Laurence said.

Fort Humphreys Soldier Held in Jewel Theft

Pvt. Peter J. Dunican, 24 years old, stationed at Fort Humphreys, Va., yesterday was charged with grand larceny, after his arrest by Detective Sergt. J. P. Flaherty.

Sergt. Flaherty charges Duncan admits having taken $100 worth of jewelry from the home of Edward H. Sennott, 3115 N street northwest, on January 16.

City Blameless, Says Bride, For Damage by Squirrels

Property Owners Can Not Collect, He Rules, if Little Animals, Termed Ferae Naturae, Destroy Possessions.

Corporation Counsel William W. Bride yesterday delivered an opinion to the District Commissioners stating that claims for damages done to homes by squirrels are not valid and should be denied.

It seems that the squirrels are, through no fault of their own, animals "ferae naturae," and not animals "domitae naturae." While this may not bother the squirrels, it is likely to bother property owners in some of the more wooded sections of the Capital.

For the law classifies for the purpose of imposing or relieving against liability, animals into these two classes, according to Mr. Bride, the "ferae naturae" type being wild and the "domitae naturae" being tamed.

The opinion was delivered in answer to a recent claim of Dr. Edwin M. Hasbrouck, for $80 because of the inadvertent deaths of two squirrels in the attic of his house at 4909 Fourteenth street northwest.

The entire third floor of the home had to be vacated for a while, it was asserted, because of odors that developed, and the services of a tinner were required to cut through the roof so that the intruders might be given decent burial.

After defining the terms wild and tame animals, Mr. Bride said: "It is my opinion that squirrels may probably be classified under the term 'ferae naturae,' or wild animals."

Explaining further that the law sets no liability for damage done by wild animals unless they have been reduced to possession, he added: "In the instant case the District of Columbia while maintaining a form of trusteeship over all wild animals within its territorial limits, has not so reduced the squirrel to possession so that liability might result to the municipality for injuries caused by that animal."

And thus that nut was cracked in favor of the squirrels and the District government.

Calvin Coolidge Says: There is no need for hasty judgment on the progressives' conference held in Washington. Many sincere people attended it. Their assumption that they are better than any of the political parties will do no harm. Apparently they have an ambitious program. They seek to guide all other public officers. Their official members have not always shown great capacity for cooperation. If they now learn to cooperate with each other they later may be able better to cooperate with other members of the Congress.

The conference has accomplished little by naked criticism. Every one knows that the Government is not perfect. Almost every one suspects that it will not be made perfect for some time. Yet we all want to see it improved. We all desire progress, prosperity and an even better distribution of the rewards of industry, although in these we now surpass the world. Very few now believe that these things can be secured by more extravagance, more loafing, more politics, or more government.

The discussion may prove helpful. A reduction of vague ideas to specific proposals usually shows whether they are sound. The formation of a constructive common-sense program for perfecting the country will not be found easy.

NEWS of SUBURBAN Washington and the Surrounding States

Appears on Pages 3 and 5 Today

They believe that a wet can carry the solid South so long as he is a Protestant and so long as he is not too rampantly wet. Gov. Roosevelt seems to meet these qualifications.

For some time Gov. Roosevelt was chary about expressing his views on prohibition. Indeed, there were many who thought that he was a dry. Mrs. Roosevelt, herself an ardent dry, used to go around and tell audiences that she and her husband never kept any liquor in the house.

In the last gubernatorial election, however, Gov. Roosevelt was forced to show his hand. Charles H. Tuttle, his Republican opponent, came out as a wet, and the voters demanded to know where Roosevelt stood. Finally, the governor came out for repeal of the eighteenth amendment and was reelected by something like a 700,000 majority.

Soft Pedaled Issue.

Since then, however, Gov. Roosevelt has soft pedaled the prohibition question. When word got around that Chairman John J. Raskob, of the Democratic national committee, was determined to call for a showdown on the liquor question at last week's meeting, the governor—or, at least, his friends—demurred.

The New York Democratic State committee adopted a resolution protesting against the committee making any recommendations on the question, and in the end Chairman Raskob announced that he simply wanted the committeemen and committeewomen to take his "home rule" plan and ponder over it until a meeting late this year or early next year. In other words, he simply postponed action.

Having found in the manual of rules that the committee may make recommendations to the national convention, Raskob evidently is still determined to force a vote on his liquor plan.

At any rate, the attitude of Roosevelt made a hit with the Southern drys, and added to his strength among them.

Already some are forecasting that the next Democratic national convention will be a repetition of the Madison Square Garden convention, with Roosevelt in the same position as was then occupied by William G. McAdoo. The Smith of the next convention, these prophets are saying, will be either the same Smith of 1924, or a man selected by the Raskob-Smith clique in the party.

Friends of Alfred E. Smith, however, insist that he will not try to run again. As for Smith himself, he insists that he has not broken with Roosevelt. The fact seems to be, however, that Raskob is opposed to Roosevelt, and that, as between Raskob and Roosevelt, Smith leans toward Raskob.

The Southern drys are hoping that Roosevelt will be nominated on a dry platform. How Roosevelt feels about a prohibition plank is not known. In the meantime, however, there are members of his own party who are accusing him of being a "straddler."

Ban Third Party.

Senator Hull, in discussing the Progressives conference yesterday, said:

"Democrats agree with the Progressives that a third party is entirely inadvisable, and as contended by Democrats in 1910-12, that the only practical hope for the liberal forces of the country is the Democratic party.

"In numerous instances the ideas expressed and the evils pointed out at the Progressive conference, were in complete harmony with the course and attitude—both past and present—of most of the great Democratic rank and file, three-fourths of whom stand for sane, practical, Jeffersonian liberalism.

"The Progressive conference is beneficial in an educational way, and in awakening to some extent the American people. The citizen has never before been so indifferent to the Government and his relations and duties to it.

"The Progressives are rendering a valuable and patriotic service, and correspondingly reenforcing the efforts of the Democratic party, in thus arousing and warning the people."

Senator Norris, in outlining his attitude, said:

"It is fair to assume that since I opposed Hoover in 1928, I will oppose him in 1932. I was satisfied then that he did not represent views on government acceptable to me, and I think that his record has shown that he is on the side of big business and the monopolies.

Asks Fair Trial.

"A third party can not be successfully formed in the United States. This has been proved many times, notably in 1912, when the movement was led by the most attractive name the country has produced."

Senator Norris described prohibition as a sham issue. If, after a "fair trial," it can be shown that the law can not be enforced, he said, he will then be ready to support some other method. But so far, he said, he does not think the law has been given a fair trial.

Police Kept Busy During Friday, 13

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., March 13.—Violences in the early hours of Friday, the thirteenth, kept police on the jump today. A restaurant proprietor was attacked by a robber, an alleged attempt was made at suicide, and a house was burglarized for loot estimated at more than $500.

Louis Yuter, 39, proprietor of the University Sandwich Shop, suffered a fractured skull when he was attacked by an unidentified assailant while on his way to his apartment. Mrs. Floyd Bunch swallowed a small amount of iodine. Dentpatch, residence of Jesse B. Wilson, attorney, was burglarized during the night.

Boys in Rum Raid May Get Diplomas

Tentative Accord Reached in St. Paul Affecting 15 of Students.

St. Paul, March 13 (A.P.).—A tentative agreement under which several of the fifteen university farm school students who were suspended for drinking will be granted diplomas was reached at a conference between Dean E. Nicholson, of the university, and members of a special Senate committee late today.

Two of the seventeen students, who were expelled on charges of bootlegging, will not be reinstated because their offense was considered to serious, under the agrement reached.

Of the fifteen, those who were first offenders will be granted their diplomas, but the awards may not be made uptil two or three months after commencement late this month.

NIXON-NIRDLINGER EXPECTED TROUBLE

French Magistrate Refuses to Push Case Against Bathing Beauty.

Nice, France, March 13 (U. P.).—Developments in the inquiry into the violent death of Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger, shot by his wife, the former Charlotte Nash, St. Louis bathing beauty, indicated today that the wealthy Philadelphia theatrical magnate had forebodings of tragedy.

One was a strange sidelight uncovered with the finding of one of Nixon-Nirdlinger's 1930 Christmas cards. It contained a cartoon of the middle-aged husband, not being shot, but himself shooting his wife. Engraved on the first page of the Christmas card folder was the inscription: "As You Sow, So Shall Ye Reap."

The card was a doubled sheet with the inscription on the front page. Inside, on one side between a picture of Eiffel Tower forming an arch with the New York Stock Exchange, were the words: "Badly Bent and Just Holding Our Own." Underneath was a group picture of Nixon-Nirdlinger and his family, identified as "Papa, Mamma, Yankee Doodle and Miss Columbia."

Cartoon of Shooting.

On the opposite sheet was a drawing of a stormy ocean and the cartoon of Nixon-Nirdlinger shooting his wife. Under that was another cartoon of two cars colliding.

The strange card had been mailed to Franklin H. Pearce, a resident of Nice, from Philadelphia, on December 10 last.

The other development indicating fear of trouble was the discovery by the police of a revolver belonging to Nixon-Nirdlinger. They found it while searching the fashionable apartment in which the slaying occurred last Wednesday night, following a quarrel in which the young wife hysterically told police her husband had sought to choke her to death. The weapon had not been used for a long time, the police said.

Residents in Nice acquainted with the Nixon-Nirdlingers told the United Press correspondent that since their arrival on March 2, the slain husband had often taken long, solitary walks along the deserted beach. He declared he liked to be alone to admire nature.

The impression grew during the day that Mrs. Nixon-Nirdlinger, who confessed she shot her husband, would never be brought to trial. It was believed likely that she would be given the advantage of the traditional French attitude relative to a "crime passional," which permits the perpetrator customarily to go free. The preliminary police inquiry seemingly has borne out the young wife's contention that she shot in defense of herself and her children.

Charles Loeb, an American lawyer representing the Philadelphia family of the dead theater man, further indicated that his clients seemed unwilling to push the prosecution of the wife. They are arranging to have the body removed to Philadelphia for burial.

The magistrate was impressed with the story Mrs. Nixon-Nirdlinger told and indicated that no reconstruction of the shooting would be necessary. "I can not see the use," the judge said.

He said that in examining the reputation of the slain man he had discovered evidence to indicate Nixon-Nirdlinger was "not the ideal married man." The coroner recorded that there were bruises and scratches on the wife, indicating a severe struggle.

Friends of the family praised the young wife—she is 26 and her husband was 54—as an excellent mother, and criticized her husband as being exceedingly jealous of her. They said that the fact she won the title of "Miss St. Louis" in 1923 and was runner-up for "Miss America" in Atlantic City that year did not prevent her from being a good wife and mother to their two children.

Children See Mother.

The children of Mrs. Nixon-Nirdlinger, innocent victims of the tragedy, saw their mother briefly in jail today, but were too young to understand her trouble.

Several American women called during the day, offering their services. Several wanted to adopt the children. The nurse would not let them out of her sight.

Although the nurse calls the children Freddie and Charlotte, friends have nicknamed them "Yankee Doodle" and "Miss Columbia," because they are the children of the girl who as Charlotte Nash, of St. Louis, nearly won the title of "Miss America" the year she met the man she married and killed.

Dyer Asks Consul's Aid In Telegram to Stimson

St. Louis, Mo., March 13 (A.P.).—Representative L. C. Dyer, of St. Louis, today telegraphed Secretary of State Stimson, asking him to cable the American Consul at Nice, France, to learn what assistance could be given to Mrs. Charlotte Nash Nixon-Nirdlinger, under arrest there for the slaying of her wealthy husband.

"I wish to have the consul ascertain whether she has an able lawyer and under what circumstances she can be released on bail, and if she is in need of finance and how much, so that whatever money she needs can be transferred to Nice for her," he said. Dyer said he would personally guarantee all expenses in connection with his request.

Secretary Stimson wired back that the request had been forwarded to the consul at Nice. Mr. Dyer's interest in the case followed appeals to him by relatives of Mrs. Nixon-Nirdlinger here.

King of Siam's Name Worries State Officials

(Associated Press.)

With the monarch's visit on April 28 the State Department is concerned about the correct pronunciation of the King of Siam's name.

In English it is spelled Prajadhipok. One official said he thought it should be Praw-jaw-he-pok, with the accent on the second syllable. From sources close to the Siamese Legation, however, word came that it should be Praw-chat-e-pok, accent on the second syllable.

1931 French Budget Passes in Long Session

Paris, March 13 (A.P.).—At the end of a 39-hour session, the longest in history, the Chamber of Deputies today approved the 1931 budget in full by a vote of 460 to 120.

It totals 50,742,081,000 francs (about $2,029,683,240), which is about 11,550,000 francs ($462,000) in excess of expenditures.

POWER FIGHT LOOMS AFTER KING CHARGES

(United Press.)

William V. King, chief accountant of the Federal Power Commission, threatened yesterday to become again a storm center of power politics, when it was learned that he had filed a memorandum with the commission making grave charges against the Niagara-Hudson Power Corporation.

King, in his report, stated that the power company was attempting to inflate by approximately $15,000,000 its price for recapture by the Government.

"There is good reason," Mr. King said, "for believing the book value, prior to the consolidation, had been written up or inflated $12,000,000 to $15,000,000, and the reason for (the commission) desiring access to the books of the predecessor companies is apparent."

It was explained at the offices of the commission that under the terms of the license granted to the Niagara company the Government had the right to purchase the plant at cost after 50 years of operation by the company.

The commission has announced that it would hold formal "executive" conferences on March 17 with representatives of the power company.

The publication of Accountant King's memorandum yesterday recalled that he had previously been termed "greatest foe of the power trust," by independent senators.

Mr. King, together with Charles A. Russell, former solicitor of the Power Commission, was ousted several months ago by the incoming power commissioners. He was later reemployed after a storm of protest had arisen which led to a suit now pending against the legality of Chairman George Otis Smith holding office.

Nye Sets Hearing On Act in April

Complete Probes Reports of Campaign Funds to Be Turned In Soon.

(Associated Press.)

Plans for hearings next month on proposed changes in the corrupt practices act for further restrictions on political campaign expenditures were announced yesterday by Chairman Nye of the Senate campaign funds committee.

Nye said leading educators, political economists, and others who have studied the problem would testify. He also announced his group would complete reports on investigations of campaign expenditures in several States by April 1.

The committee has submitted reports only for Nebraska and Pennsylvania. Nye said inquiries had been completed in Colorado, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Montana, Oklahoma, and Illinois.

Hoover Will Keep Pen That Vetoed Loan Bill

Elyria, Ohio, March 13 (U.P.).—President Hoover is not giving away any fountain pens as long as they're in good working order, members of the Elyria American Legion Post learned today.

The legion members recently wrote to the President and asked for the pen with which he vetoed the veterans' loan bill.

"The pen is in good shape, and I intend to use it as long as possible," the President wrote them.

U. S. ARMY STANDS FIFTH IN WORLD

French Magazine Says Reds Have Available Force of 1,812,000 Men.

Paris, March 13 (A.P.).—The United States, cited as with 565,000 men in its Regular Army, National Guard, Philippine Scouts and other military formations, is ranked fifth among the nations in fighting strength in statistics compiled by the French weekly L'Illustration.

First rank is given to Soviet Russia, with a military potentiality of 1,812,000 men.

England comes second with 780,000, including regulars, territorials and forces in India, but not counting the dominions.

Italian forces are computed to number 773,000 men, including the Fascist militia roughly estimated at 400,000.

France is put in fourth place with 583,000 men, including gendarmes, customs guards and forest rangers.

Sixth in general armament and fifth in Europe is ranked Germany, with 285,000 men—100,000 in the Reichswehr or regular army, the rest in the police and other national forces.

L'Illustration says Germany possesses armament to supply 90 divisions with rifles and cannon, and 84 with machine guns. The estimates were prepared in answer to similar ones in the Berliner Illustrierte Zeitung and Illustrated London News, which the French considered too high.

Veterans' Bureau Sets Record in Loan Checks

(Associated Press.)

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, told President Hoover yesterday the Veterans' Bureau had exceeded all expectations in issuing checks for loans authorized by the last Congress.

Within the first week closed March 7, the bureau had received 966,793 applications and had mailed 105,766 checks totaling $40,358,811. It is expected, the administrator told the President, that the output will increase at least 50 per cent this week and shortly reach a peak of at least 200,000 per week.

FORMER HOUSE MEMBER FREED ON CHARGE OF IMPORTING RUM

Acquitted, the former representative announced that he would be a candidate for the House in the next election and declared he was confident he would be reelected. He resented newspaper stories that his indictment on the liquor charge had been a factor in his defeat in the last election. He simply had been beaten in the general landslide, as he called it, but he ran 21,000 votes ahead of his ticket, he said.

Irvin Goldstein and John J. Sirica, assistant District attorneys, who conducted the prosecution, told the jury that the story told by the defense was a fairy tale. They derided it and asked the jury to wonder why the defense had not filled several obvious loopholes.

The defense had amitted the Government charges that prohibition agents had found in Mr. Denison's office in the House Office Building a trunk containing eighteen bottles of whisky and six bottles of gin. It was the contention, however, that the wrong trunk had been shipped to Mr. Denison and his nephew had taken his trunk to St. Louis and had not informed him of the fact until weeks afterward.

The Government's case just about collapsed when it was disclosed that the whisky and gin bottles offered in evidence had been variously labeled. One was said to have been seized from an unknown violator in the Senate Office Building the year before the trunk was found in the Denison office. Another was labeled as having been seized in Mr. Denison's office the day before prohibition agents went to the office. Only one was labeled as having been taken in his office on the day the prohibition agents went there and found the trunk of liquor.

Called Comedy of Errors.

"You," William E. Leahy, chief of defense counsel, told the jury, "have been sitting here for two and a half days listening to a comedy of errors. This case never should have been brought before this court.

"The prohibition unit has passed the buck to these two boys sitting here," and he indicated Mr. Goldstein and Mr. Sirica, who happen to be the youngest members of the District attorney's staff.

"In the future," Mr. Leahy said, "when the Prohibition Bureau messes up cases and is afraid to assume the responsibility that is rightfully theirs, they ought not to be permitted to use Government money and waste the time of its officials in trying to wash the dirty linen of their mistakes."

Sanders Opens Arguments.

Everett Sanders, formerly secretary to President Coolidge, made the opening statement of the defense to the jury. He was followed by E. Hilton Jackson, another of defense counsel. Both Mr. Goldstein and Mr. Sirica addressed the jury. Each took about a half hour and the case was put up to the jury shortly after 2 o'clock.

When George T. Collins, foreman of the jury, announced its decision, Mr. Denison shook hands with his counsel and shook hands with most of the members of the jury as they filed past him. He thanked Mr. Goldstein and Mr. Sirica for their conduct in the course of the trial.

Justice Gordon, Mr. Denison said, had ruled fairly in the course of the trial and he had been given courteous treatment by the prosecutors but, and he emphasized it, he never should have been indicted or brought to trial on the charge and the whole proceeding was persecution and not prosecution.

TILSON LISTS DEEDS OF LAST CONGRESS

Places Relief Bills at Top and Brands Senate Rules as Peculiar.

(United Press.)

The case for the Hoover administration was presented yesterday by Representative John Q. Tilson (Republican), Connecticut, majority floor leader in the House.

Following closely upon Democratic and Progressive arraignments of the administration as a do-nohting Government in times of emergency, Mr. Tilson, in the role of attorney for the defense, listed what he regards as the constructive achievements of the Congress just ended.

While there was no announced connection between the two incidents, Mr. Tilson's vigorous defense yesterday rcealled the recnet dcelaration of Senator Simeon D. Fess (Republican), Ohio, chairman of the Republican national committee, who said that his praty was due to "go into high gear" in presneting its virtues to the public. In other words, the administration leaders have decided to fight back at the Democrats, who have been on the offensive for nearly two years.

In the Tilson galaxy of Republican achievements during the last session, first place was accorded to emergency relief measures. He listed appropriations in this category aggregating $400,000,000, with an additional $250,000,000 for the Federal Farm Board revolving fund.

Cites Relief Bills.

Unemployment relief bills, sponsored by Senator Robert F. Wagner, New York, were also listed by Mr. Tilson with a note of acknowledgment to Mr. Wagner and a qualification that they could not have been enacted without Republican votes.

Weekly half holidays for postal workers and Saturday half holidays for other Government employes constitute ano ther administration enactment of importance, Mr. Tilson said. He also cited legislation compelling contractors on Government building projects to pay wage rates prevailing in the locality where the work is being done.

Amendment of the Jones "five and ten" law to limit penalties for alight infractions was described by Mr. Tilson as a "noteworthy event" during the last session.

He also pointed with pride to the bill imposing additional regulations regarding the sale of oleomargarine. The bill providing that American women retain their citizenship after marriage to an alien, unless specifically renounced, was recalled by Mr. Tilson as "another important act of this Congress."

The tariff, which has been the object of vehement Democratic and Progressive criticism, was defended by Mrs. Tilson, who explained that those who have jobs are better off in terms of wages than ever before.

Tariff Policy Praised.

"I think the credit for this may to a large extent be given to our sound protective tariff policy," Mr. Tilson said, "that this depression has to only a very limited degree been accompanied by a reduction of wages. The fact is that while many people may now be out of employment, those who are regularly employed are perhaps better off than ever."

Mr. Tilson blamed the "peculiar rules of the Senate" for the failure of the Vestal copyright bill and legislation for an immigration holiday.

He also put the Progressives on notice with respect to the Norris (Republican), Nebraska, antilame duck amendment.

Either the Senate must give up its rule of unlimited debate or the House will insist upon a fixed date for the adjournments of the short sessions of Congress.

"Otherwise," Mr. Tilson said, "it would be necessary for Congress to remain in session until every bill favored by a senator is enacted into law. The Treasury would probably be unable to stand indefinitely the strain that would be put upon it by such a program."

Abbot Not to Edit Dry Paper, He Says

Denies Being Approached to Aid Rumored Successor ot New York World.

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—Willis J. Abbot, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, tonight denied a story published today in the St. Petersburg, Fla., Evening Independent that he had been approached regarding the editorship of a "dry" morning newspaper in New York to take the place of the New York World.

Published accounts said officials of the Antisaloon League discussed establishment of the newspaper at executive conferences in St. Petersburg recently.

Mr. Abbot also said he had no knowledge of a proposal to transmit the Chrisitian Science Monitor throughout the country by television when the invention is perfected. O. G. Christgau, assistant to F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Antisaloon League, was quoted as saying such a possibility was discussed at the St. Petersburg conference.

Raleigh, N. C., March 13 (A.P.).—Joseph Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, said tonight a report from St. Petersburg, Fla., that he was offered editorship of a new "dry" newspaper in New York was "news" to him.

ENGINEERS SEEKING TO HALT LANDSLIDE

Bridge Dynamiting Planned by Army Men to Save French Towns.

Chambery, France, March 13 (A.P.).—Four hundred million cubic meters of rock, snow and earth, sliding inexorably down the mountains at the rate of 500 feet an hour has driven the inhabitants of four villages into terrified flight in the last 24 hours.

Great walnut trees which have stood for generations were bowled over like stripe of lath, engulfed in the unhurried mass which swallowed up farm houses and barns.

Army engineers were coming in tonight to try to divert the slide by blowing up a bridge at Granges. They hope this would split the movement in two and send the greater part of the mass into a mountain torrent which would carry it away.

Town's Residents Flee.

The inhabitants of Granges were evacuated this afternoon and ordered to move farther down the valley. Three arms of the landslide threatened that village, the hamlets in the commune of Motteen Beauce and villages between them.

The landslide was caused by heavy rains of the past few weeks. It tore loose from the hillside with a great rumble and began moving over an area of about 100 acres, gathering volume as it rolled. So far no deaths have been reported.

The main slide, a lumbering wall of mud 50 feet high, moved slowly and relentlessly down the hill with occasional booming explosions which sounded like thunder.

Cattle Driven Ahead.

Before it fled the panic-stricken peasants, staggering under the weight of their furniture and such other goods as they could save, driving their cattle ahead of them.

On the crest of the wave for a time today rode a flimsy farm house which suddenly collapsed and was devoured by the mud.

Hundreds are homeless and in Bellecombe-Savoie part of a mountain overlooking the River Isere toppled into the stream, damming the current and blocking the roadways.

There are several minor landslides elsewhere in the region, including one near Brides-Les-Bains, a summer resort.

Major Stations To Synchronize

WEAF, WJZ, WTIC and WBAL Will Tie Up for Unit Broadcast.

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—Synchronized broadcasting, heralded as an improvement over previous attempts at identical operation of stations on the same wavelength, is to be started by four National Broadcasting Co. units next Monday.

The two key stations of the chain, WEAF and WJZ, New York are to be tied together with WTIC, Hartford, Conn., and WBAL, Baltimore, and operated as two stations rather than as four. Approval to do so was received today from the Federal Radio Commission at Washington.

RED CROSS TO CLOSE PITTSYLVANIA UNITS

Improved Conditions Lead to Diminished Activity by Relief Workers.

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., March 13. — The American Red Cross will cease to function as an active relief agency in the agricultural section of Pittsylvania County after March 15, it was announced today by Langhorne Jones, chairman of the Pittsylvania Unit, which has been relieving destitution among farmers affected by the drought since last December.

On that day the two relief stations, one at Chatham and the other at Gretna, will be closed, but work will be continued on a diminishing scale by the county, such as investigating cases of destitution and meeting them with relief. The staff of case workers will be withdrawn, also the medical workers, and the task will be carried on by the normal personnel of the county unit.

Since relief began to be administered, the Red Cross has spent $6,500 and has received supplies as donations representing a value of $1,200.

Many of the large landowners have agreed to "stake" tenants with supplies until the soil begins to yield its harvest; and with some of the destitute families realizing loans on war veterans' certificates, the situation has ameliorated.

The order will not immediately apply to Schoolfield, where the relief situation is one of employment rather than agricultural. Some 400 families are still being given food by the Red Cross in the textile village, but Mr. Jones said today that with many of the idle families moving from Schoolfield it would not be long before the special Red Cross set-up in the emergency following the strike will be withdrawn. The date for this, however, has not been determined.

Names were announced yesterday of the 73 men who have been selected for jury duty in Prince Georges County during the April term of the Circuit Court. They were drawn from a list of 200 selected by Judge Joseph C. Mattingly.

The first list, of 48 names, is the one from which the grand jury will be selected. It includes William A. Duvall, foreman; Orrow P. Collins, Frank L. Fleshman, Bruce L. Buck, Ralph Devaughn, Millard Thorne, James W. Latimer, John P. Beall, John A. Trueman and George E. Simmons.

John H. Fetty, George A. Alst, James H. Shegogue, Joseph J. Woodward, John Porter, Fred R. Binger, Herbert J. Moffat, John M. Burgess, John F. Collins, jr., Horace K. Fuller, J. Calvin Pyle, George P. Bewley, John G. Parker, Bert H. Wise, J. Albert Ireland, Fred J. Welprecht, H. D. Kinnaman, D. Wilmer Pyles, William W. Queen, sr., Henry B. Contee, Henry S. Swann and Benton Warfield.

John L. Holliday, Basil I. Tillman, Clarence Simpson, Ephriam Schafer, Samuel O. Tayman, Henry L. Howard, George E. Gude, Oscar T. Poore, Edward Donaldson, John W. Larcombe, William D. Cox, Edmund Gibson, Hezekiah Johnson, John F. A. Martin, Edgar R. Cable, and Rudolph F. Adler.

The first panel will be required to report on the first Monday in April, while the second will report the following Monday, on April 13. The second panel includes James B. Bland, Herman C. Thieme, J. Wilson Rawlings, Harvey S. Naylor, Gustavus Timanus, Ammon S. Ripple, John E. Kane, John W. Brady, James Prout, and Berry E. Moore.

Joseph W. Aman, Ellery W. Baker, Bascom S. Carter, Jacob E. Metzger, Humphrey Beckett, John W. C. Mack, Frank E. Barrett, Joseph W. Watson, Charles Binger, Howard M. Perrie, William A. Gallahan, W. P. Von Osterman, Rudolph Entzian, James T. Norris, and Charles N. Brown.

Requests to be freed from jury service must be filed in writing with Summerfield D. Hall, clerk of the Circuit Court, before March 26. No excuse will be accepted unless for sickness of the prospective juror or his immediate family, according to Mr. Hall.

Despite the formal protest of one organization and an unfavorable resolution passed by another, the bill enabling Prince Georges County to take advantage of the Cramton act came one step nearer passage when it was favorably reported out of committee.

The bill provides that Montgomery County shall issue bonds to the extent of $1,200,000 and that prince Georges may issue $800,000 worth with the agreement of the county commissioners. A committee from Mount Rainier went to Annapolis early in the week to protest against the bill, and the Municipal Officers Association has also condemned it in a formal resolution.

The bill was originally reported favorably by the joint committee of the Prince Georges and Montgomery County delegations, and had reached its third reading. At this point, Kent R. Mullikin, of the Prince Georges delegation, asked to have it recommitted. The bill was reconsidered after the hearing given the Mount Rainier delegation, but was again reported favorably.

The objection of the Prince Georges County Municipal Officers Association is based on the fact that the bill provides no improvements for the park lands acquired. It is also pointed out that many of the incorporated towns in the county have obligated themselves heavily to pay for paving improvements, and that these bills will not be paid off for from twelve to fifteen years. If the bill is passed, it is asked that a provision be made that no land be bought at a price higher than the assessed value plus 25 per cent.

A fine of $100, with an alternative of six months in the House of Correction, was placed against Noble G. Mandue yesterday in police court in Marlboro. Mandue, who lives on Sixth street southwest near K street, was also fined $25 for reckless driving. He was committed to jail in default of his fine.

David M. Worsham, of Penn street near Bladensburg road northeast, forfeited $110 on charges of driving while drunk and reckless driving. Worsham was arrested several weeks ago on similar charges by State Policeman W. A. Rogers.

F. H. Strobel, of Baltimore, was fined $50 for possession of a half-gallon of liquor and was sent to jail in default of the money. Rex Ward was also committed in default of a fine of $50 imposed by Judge J. Chew Sheriff on a charge of selling an unregistered soft drink. Ward, who lives in Washington, represents the Columbia Bottling Co.

John A. Mangum, of Croome Station, was fined $10 for assault and battery on Charles A. Duvall, also of Croome. A warrant charging Duvall with assault on Mangum was dismissed. Orpin T. Whitney, of Twenty-fourth street near M street northwest, was fined $10 for reckless driving. Charges of driving while drunk and failing to stop after colliding were dismissed.

A conviction on a charge of reckless [illegible] Glasscock a $10 fine. W. P. Plumley, of Capitol [illegible] occasion. [illegible] charges of setting up a gaming table were dismissed.

Charlottesville Father Is Missing

Parent of 12 Children Has Not Been Seen Since Saturday Night.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., March 13.—City and county authorities are engaged in a search for Alonzo Dudley, 49, who disappeared from his home near Hickory Hill Saturday night. Chief of Police Maurice F. Greaver was asked by R. H. Dudley, of this city, to instruct his force to follow all possible clues in the disappearance.

Dudley, the father of twelve children, left his home on what is known as the old county farm, four miles south of the city limits, early Saturday morning to come here. While in the city he saw his brother and told him he intended spending the night with Randolph Gibson, a kinsman of his wife. When he failed to appear at the Gibson residence or to return home the next morning, a search was instituted. Relatives stated he had never been away from home for any length of time.

Supervisor Denies Charges of Graft

Woodstock Judge Receives Complaints Against C. James Hottel.

Special to The Washington Post.

Woodstock, Va., March 13.—A petition was filed in the circuit court of Shenandoah County this week asking Judge Philip Williams to remove from office Supervisor C. James Hottel, of Ashby district, who is chairman of the Board of Supervisors. Hottel denies emphatically all the charges.

Judge Williams has filed a writ for the appearance of Hottel in court on March 17 to answer the charges of his fellow citizens.

The petitioners, W. H. Tisinger, William R. Bowman, R. Turner Brown and J. M. Polk, citizens of Ashby district and Mount Jackson, allege that Supervisor Hottel reflored the bridge across the Shenandoah River at Mount Jackson and that the old flooring and joists in the bridge, valued at $75, were appropriated by him for his own use.

It is further alleged by the petitioners that the supervisor furnished lumber for another bridge in his district; that he paid John Buhl, who sawed the lumber for Hottel, with the understanding that Buhl was to return the money to the supervisor, less the amount due for labor and sawing the lumber.

The supervisor is charged with using his own team on the county roads at a charge of $4 per day.

EIGHT ESCAPE HURTS IN HOME EXPLOSION

Bootleggers' Activities Are Blamed in Wrecking of Berlin, Md., House.

Berlin, Md., March 13 (A.P.).—An explosion apparently of dynamite today partly destroyed the home of George K. Jarvis, sr., but eight persons asleep at the time escaped unharmed.

The explosion, blamed by police on the activities of bootleggers, was one of a series of acts of violence here and at Ocean City, nearby seaside resort, in the last two years.

Four men are under $3,000 bond each for trial at the March term of circuit court, in connection with an attack on the home of Chief of Police Robert Allen at Ocean City last May 16.

One of the four men indicted was Duncan Jarvis, son of George K. Jarvis, sr., who was in the elder Jarvis' home today.

The home of another son, George Jarvis, jr., was destroyed by fire last fall and a Baltimore police detective was brought here to determine whether the fire was incendiary. The force of the blast today demolished the entire rear part of the Jarvis home and damaged the front part, in which the occupants slept. The damage was estimated at $1,000 or more. A pet dog was killed.

Man, 28, Is Missing After Auto Crash

Authorities Begin Searching for J. T. Simmons, of Richmond.

Hapover, Va., March 13 (A.P.).—County authorities were searching today for J. T. Simmons, 28, of Richmond, a native of Hand, S. C., who disappeared Tuesday night after the automobile he and two companions were occupying was wrecked near here.

His companions, Harvey Richards and Jack Kirtley, both of Richmond, reported they left Simmons at the scene of the wreck after he had expressed the wish to await arrival of mechanics. They said Simmons was not hurt in the accident.

Plans were made today to drag a nearby lake. Residents in the vicinity reported they heard a scream from the direction of the lake shortly after the accident occurred.

FAIRFAX RESIDENTS DECRY FISHING BAN

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon, 2324-W-2.

A mass meeting of citizens interested in commercial fishing in the Potomac River below Alexandria was held at Accotink with Justice of Peace Harry Shephard presiding. Final preparations were made for the presentation of the fishermen's case to the State Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, which will meet in Alexandria on Monday. The commission ruled last month closing commercial fishing in the bays, inlets and creeks along the Potomac River from Hallowing Point to Washington. Leon L. Freeman, of Vienna, Fairfax County delegate to the Legislature, addressed the meeting on plans for presenting the case to the commission.

A conference with Judge Howard W. Smith, representative-elect, has been arranged for 9 o'clock Monday morning. A committee representing the fishermen, consisting of Justice Harry Shephard, of Accotink; John Haislip, of Belmont Bay, and George W. Herring, of Woodbridge, will present their side, together with the committee appointed by the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce.

The ruling of the commission is a result of a law enacted at the last session of the Legislature sponsored by the game commission, which practically abolishes commercial fishing in the inland waters of Virginia, but is being placed in operation only in this section of Fairfax County. A petition was presented at the last meeting of the commission by Judge William S. Snow, of Alexandria, a member of the commission, on behalf of fishermen, urging that the law be relaxed so as to permit fishing with nets nine months of the year.

The session of the State Game Commission is being held in Alexandria at the invitation of Judge Snow so as to enable the fishermen to appear and explain their views.

The enforcement of the law will deprive a large number of residents of Mount Vernon district in Fairfax County of a means of livelihood and a loss of thousands of dollars of equipment. This section is particularly affected since much of the commercial fishing is done inside of headlands and in streams and bays which constitute Virginia waters.

The Women's Auxiliary of the Volunteer Fire Department at McLean will serve a chicken dinner this evening at McLean. The dinner will be under the supervision of Mrs. J. L. Kefauver and Mrs. A. M. Berthiaume, with Mrs. Lewis Magarity chairman of the dining room.

The Falls Church Parent-Teacher Association radio program which will be broadcast this afternoon over Station WJSV at Mount Vernon Hills, will consist of selections by Mrs. Mary Ryer, Mrs. Milton Roberts, Guy Ervin and Dr. Macon Ware, with Mrs. James Brown as accompanist. Mrs. O. B. Livingston, president of the association, will act as announcer.

The Home Interest Club at Herndon will be entertained at a luncheon today at the home of Mrs. Russell A. Lynn.

The State Highway Commission was voted an 80-foot right of way through the Fairfax County Fair Grounds, providing the new branch of the Lee highway is built within three years, at a recent meeting of stockholders of the fair association. The stockholders instructed Robert D. Graham, secretary, to ask the highway commission to move buildings that are now within the right of way at the expense of the State.

Stockholders voted to hold the fair for three days this year, instead of the customary four days. The fair will be held this year on September 10, 11 and 12, with a horse show on Thursday and Friday and a big racing program on Saturday. The fair association will manage the last day of the fair this year instead of turning that day over to the Ku Klux Klan, as in former years.

The $5,000 first trust note which is held by the Fairfax National Bank on the property of the fair association is due, and the bank has asked for a settlement. An effort will be made to have ten persons subscribe $500 each, and four of the directors have indicated a willingness to share this note. They were President E. M. Palmer, Secretary Robert D. Graham, H. H. Wakefield, and A. R. Sherwood. The secretary was instructed to obtain the necessary contributions.

The Fairfax Hunt Club will hold the last fox hunt of the season this morning, to start from Costello's, at Seneca, on the Potomac River. In event the roads are muddy the horses will be unloaded at Dranesville.

Church at Grave Of Poe Hit by Fire

Flames Wreck Portion of Historic Westminster at Baltimore.

Baltimore, March 13 (A.P.).—Historic Westminster Presbyterian Church, in the grounds of which is the grave of Edgar Allan Poe, the poet, was damaged by fire today. Starting from a defective furnace, the flames wrecked the pulpit, destroyed the organ and damaged a portion of the balcony.

The entire structure seemed doomed when firemen arrived on a dozen pieces of apparatus, but the flames were confined largely to the basement. Beneath the floor of the basement lie the ancient graves and vaults of many former parishioners.

The white marker on Poe's grave, in a corner of the burial ground, was not damaged. The entire damage, it was said, is covered by insurance.

18 Charges of Larceny Lodged Against Boy, 12

Fourteen charges of petty larceny, four of grand larceny and one charge of assault were lodged against 12-year-old Francis Thornton yesterday as the result of investigation begun March 3 when he was arrested. All the alleged thefts occurred in buildings at George Washington University where pocketbooks were taken and desks rifled.

The boy came to grief when, according to police, he was caught rummaging through a beauty parlor on L street near Eighteenth northwest by the proprietress, Mrs. Mae James. He slapped her, she said, so she locked him in a room and summoned police. His address was given as Virginia avenue near Twenty-fourth street northwest.

SCHOOLS CONTINUE 10-40 TICKET SALE

Teachers Believe System Can Be Handled Without Great Difficulty.

Sale of 3-cent street car tickets in books of 10 and 40 tickets to school children will be continued without further complaint from school officials unless the future brings an unreasonable amount of work to teachers in the signing of applications and the books, Stephen E. Kramer, assistant superintendent of schools, announced yesterday.

When the sale of 10-ticket books was first decided upon, school officials objected because of the possibility of teachers being given an undue amount of labor. Announcement was made by the school officers that the 10-ticket book system would be given a week's trial and that after this time if the duties of teachers were increased unreasonably that the Public Utilities Commission would be asked to eliminate the 10-ticket book.

The school heads have now agreed to continue the 10-ticket book without complaint. Mr. Kramer explained yesterday that the street car companies have cooperated splendidly with the schools and that it is the desire of the schools to facilitate the work as much as possible for the street car companies.

The majority of pupils bought a week's supply of tickets and very few have returned for more applications since the first issue last Monday, it was learned yesterday. Fear was first expressed that many pupils would buy books of ten, use them in a few days and then return for more. Teachers are obliged to sign applications for tickets as well as the ticket books.

BURIAL CASE PROBE REVEALS MYSTERY

Policies Totaling $50,000 Uncollected; Identity of Body Questioned.

Perry, Iowa, March 13 (A.P.).—Insurance policies totaling $50,000 remained uncollected today as Dallas County officials launched an investigation into the double mystery growing out of the burial of an unidentified body as that of John Smith, Farmer-Labor candidate for governor in 1930.

Mrs. Smith, beneficiary of the insurance taken out on her husband's life, was convinced that her husband met foul play on the night of February 3 when his automobile containing the unidentified body was burned on the highway near Denison. She said she would make no move to collect the insurance until the whereabouts of her husband, still undisclosed, is definitely established.

The identity of the body constituted the other angle of the mystery facing authorities. The body was exhumed and examined Thursday at the request of the insurance companies. An autopsy revealed that it had been embalmed before burning and that a skull fracture suffered by Smith some years before was not in evidence on the body. Dental charts of Smith and the teeth of the body also failed to check.

County Attorney George Sackett and Sheriff C. A. Knee left early today for an unannounced destination presumably to investigate a clew to the mystery. Representatives of insurance companies have already conducted an investigation into certain phases of the case in Northwest Iowa towns.

Smith carried policies totaling $20,000 which provided double indemnity in case of accidental death.

The policies were carried by the Travelers Life Insurance Co., the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co. and the Minnesota Mutual Life Insurance Co.

STATISTICS SOUGHT ON ILLEGAL ALIENS

Immigration Commissioner Asks Data, With View to Aiding Jobless.

Baltimore, Md., March 13 (A.P.).—Letters requesting information on all aliens illegally in this country were sent today by T. B. R. Mudd, commissioner of immigration for the Eighth District, to all municipal and State officials in the district, comprising Maryland, District of Columbia, the 25 northern counties of Virginia and the 13 eastern counties of West Virginia.

Mr. Mudd said he was not making a particular drive, but that he thought the time opportune to locate as many persons illegally here as possible. He pointed out that with the present unemployment situation many aliens were keeping American citizens out of work.

"With a view to protecting the interests of both the American citizen and the bona fide alien resident, especially during unemployment, every effort should be made to rid the United States of the alien who is illegally here, and whose very first act upon coming to this country, his surreptitious entry is in disregard and violation of our laws," the letter said.

The disposition of an alien frequently means a vacant job to be filled by some one who is rightfully here, the letter points out. The communication defines the difference between "deportable" and "nondeportable aliens" of those not conversant with the immigration laws.

Bushman $1,000,000 Mate Inquiry Brings Mail Deluge

Criticized by Many, Actor Looks Over Pile of Offers From Girls of Every Type, Box of Lemons, and Smiles.

Chicago, March 13 (U.P.).—Francis X. Bushman, the one-man matrimonial agency, was doing a land office business tonight.

Bushman, former movie star, turned prospective gigolo and fortune hunter by his own announcement, said that since he had expressed his desire for an heiress as a wife he'd been deluged with letters, photographs, telegrams and phone calls from women the Nation over.

"They even invaded my dressing room here at the Kedzie Theater," added the 47-year-old and somewhat portly Bushman, who is playing in that sterling drama, "The Squaw Man," at Chicago's only remaining stock house.

A stack of letters from prospective brides was on his dressing table. Another pile of letters, not quite so high, from women who suggested jail and horsewhipping and who told him he ought to be ashamed of himself, was nearby.

Scattered over all was an array of photographs of young women, old women, blondes, brunettes, smiling beauties, scowling spinsters and at least two pictures of women whose hair was so bountiful and so curly that Bushman said:

"Transformations. I can tell, even in pictures."

One of the pictures was of a woman who wore nothing much but a scanty veil.

"She sent a letter along," explained Bushman, "saying that she had her picture taken that way so I'd be sure to know what I was getting. But she didn't say how much money she had."

He tossed the picture in a waste basket.

If a woman is homely and blonde and hasn't much personality, Bushman said, she'd have to have at least $1,000,000 before he'd consider marrying her.

But if she's young and pretty and brunette, charming and witty and well traveled, well, then, Bushman said, he'd consider making a "financial discount."

At this writing he had applications from 67 women. Most of them he discarded, because they failed to mention their financial qualifications. He saved five to arrange interviews.

He also got an offer from a movie concern and a half-dozen lemons from a donor who failed to inclose a card.

Bushman, one of the most popular of the movie idols in the early days of the century, made millions, married twice, got entangled in marital and financial difficulties and finally found himself forced to act at the Kedzie Theater to provide himself with the actor's proverbial "coffee and cakes."

"But it's a hard life," he said, "and I'm used to luxury. If any woman wants to keep me in my accustomed style, I'm willing to mary her and keep her happy."

WORK SLATED SOON ON SCHOOL BUDGET

Citizens and Officials to Hold Conference on Monday on Estimates.

School officials and the Board of Education will begin at once on the work of preparing the school estimates for the 1933 District budget, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, announced yesterday.

The annual joint conference of citizens and school officials on the estimates will be held Monday night at Franklin School. At this time civic groups will present recommendations for new schools or other school improvements in their respective communities.

School officials have been asked by the superintendent to submit all their suggestions for estimates by 1 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, March 21. After this date, the finance committee of the Board of Education will make a study of the estimates.

Estimates must be submitted to the budget officer by April 25. The Commissioners will begin their study of the items May 1 in order that the budget for the District may be submitted to the Bureau of the Budget by July 15. The work is being done earlier this year than ever before.

What do the grim watchdogs of the desert know of luxuries? Well, try to take their Chesterfields away from them! Over there—and here too—a good cigarette means good tobaccos. What you taste in Chesterfield cigarettes is milder and better tobaccos—nothing else—blended and "cross-blended" to produce a satisfying fragrance, a flavor which is Chesterfield's alone!

FOR NINETEEN years, our Research Department has kept intimate touch with every new development of Science that could be applied to the manufacture of cigarettes. During this period there has been no development of tested value or importance to the smoker which we have not incorporated into the making of Chesterfield cigarettes.

store had not been molested when he went off duty this morning. However, when John Cassidy, the day watchman, arrived at 8 o'clock to take his turn of duty the robbery was discovered.

Officials did not make the robbery public until afternoon.

A member of the firm who declined to be quoted told authorities a reward of $25,000 would be given to anyone furnishing information to lead to the capture and conviction of the robbers. He said a larger reward would be posted for recovery of the loot.

The store, operated only during the three months winter season, is located at 327 Worth avenue, one of the prominent thoroughfares of the social colony.

Made Careful Selection.

Mr. Peacock announced late today preliminary checks showed the total loss would be near $750,000. The robbers, he said, appeared to have made a careful selection.

He listed a portion of the jewels as follows:

Pearls, $250,000.
Diamond brooches, $150,000.
Diamond bracelets, $100,000.
Diamond rings, $75,000.

He said there were two pearl necklaces missing, valued at $75,000 and $50,000. One diamond ring was listed at $15,000.

MAN SLAIN BY POKER BURIED IN VIRGINIA

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., March 13.—Burial rites for Raphael Sanchez, Spaniard, who was murdered in Roanoke on Friday night, January 9, and whose body was found the following day on the banks of Mechums River, were held at 10:30 o'clock this morning in Riverview Cemetery, the service being conducted by the Rev. J. W. Bouldin, pastor of the Hinton Avenue Methodist Church.

The body of Sanchez had been held at a local morgue for the past nine weeks, awaiting word from a sister of the victim, who resides in Spain. Instructions to bury the body here came from L. E. Hurt, jr., Roanoke attorney, who has charge of Sanchez' affairs.

Trial of Mike Bataller, 23-year-old Cuban, for the murder of Sanchez will take place in Roanoke this month. He is alleged to have confessed to the slaying. He told police he struck the Spaniard with a stove poker in the kitchen of a cafe in Roanoke. He said Sanchez advanced on him with a knife during a quarrel over money. The body, when found on the banks of Mechums River, bore marks of numerous blows, in contradiction of Bataller's statement that he had killed Sanchez with one blow of the poker.

It was not until Monday following the murder that a chain of evidence led to Bataller's arrest in Roanoke. Emilio Consuelo, alias Frank Nelson, is said to have witnessed the slaying and was indicated as an accomplice.

The body of Sanchez remained for several days at the Hill & Irving funeral parlors here before identification was made by a group of Roanoke policemen who came here to view the body.

HUFF KIN HINT PLEA FOR DULANEY TRIAL

felt constrained in her sudden bereavement to ride in the funeral procession.

"We are not doing any talking at all for you newspapermen, so get out of here," ordered the dead man's father, Albert A. Huff.

"How about this rumor that you don't like the grand jury action and that you are going to try to bring Dulaney to trial for the killing?" members of the family were asked.

"Yeah, that's so. We've placed the whole matter in the hands of a friend and we intend to do something right away, eve nthough you know we have ten years to bring charges in a case of this kind," replied one of the younger members before the door was slammed by the elder Mr. Huff and newspaper men ordered away.

This startling new development came as the first intimation that the family of the slain man were resentful at the finding of the grand jury Thursday that Dulaney, a Washington street car conductor, shot and killed Huff in "justifiable homicide" when he found Huff trying to slip away from a rendezvous with Mrs. Dulaney.

The shooting occurred Monday night in the Dulaney apartment at 1317 H street northeast when the 33-year-old street car conductor returned home suddenly to find his wife and Huff holding what he termed another surreptious meeting in a long series in recent weeks.

Sighting the pair through the window, Dulaney telephoned the Ninth Precinct police. "There is going to be some trouble at Thirteenth and H streets northeastsend a man around."

Policeman W. L. Dent, arriving there, met Dulaney, who said he thought "a burglar" or "a man" was in the apartment. While the policeman slipped up the rear steps, Dulaney entered the front door, grabbed a pistol from beneath a pillow and fired three shots at Huff, who died several hours later.

According to County Clerk William H. Duncan, the February term of the Circuit Court will adjourn today.

CHILD WELFARE STUDIED IN COUNTY

League of Women Voters in Montgomery Hear Speakers on Subject.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post.
9103 Conn. Ave., North Chevy Chase, Md.
Telephone Wisconsin 4203.

Progress of handicapped child welfare work in Maryland was discussed by speakers yesterday at the second of a series of meetings held under the auspices of the Montgomery County League of Women Voters in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School. The program also was sponsored by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Parent-Teacher Association.

Fifteen or twenty per cent of school children are mentally handicapped and require special training classes, Dr. Harry F. Latshaw, director of special education for Baltimore, declared. Many of the children owe their mental handicap to physical handicaps or physical environment. They require vocational training and placement.

With the assistance and cooperation of the surgeons, physically handicapped children are best cared for in classrooms where they can be taught vocational training among children also afflicted, according to Dr. R. C. Thompson, director of special education for the State of Maryland.

Miss Olive A. Whilden, who has charge of work among deaf children in Baltimore, told of the work being done there and praised the audiometer presented to Montgomery County's schools by the Woman's Improvement Club of Silver Spring.

Miss Adele Stamp, dean of women at the University of Maryland and chairman of the committee on education of the Maryland League of Women Voters, presided in the place of Miss Lavinia Engle, Montgomery County member of the House of Delegates, who was unable to be present because of attendance at the legislature.

Miss Engle informed Miss Stamp, however, that the bill which appropriate $10,000 for work among physically handicapped children and which would be allocated amongst the counties which would match the sum allotted, had passed the House and is now ready for presentation to the Senate at Annapolis.

Dr. Edwin W. Broome, county superintendent of school, said that Montgomery County tried some years ago to start a class for handicapped children but that it failed because of the lack of tranhsportation facilities. The county has not had available funds for this work but is planning to start such work as soon as possible although no definite plans have been evolved.

Theft of a 22-foot boom from a steam shovel clam-shell bucket and which weighed about 6 tons, was reported to police of the Silver Spring substation yesterdya by the Stonehurst Quarries, near Bethesda. Just what use the thief can make of his Herculean feat's reward is not plain to the police.

An absolute divorce from Mrs. Rose A. Pifer, whose last known address was Washingotn, was granted Bernard A. Pifer, of Silver Spring, yesterday by Judge Robert B. Peter, in Circuit Court at Rockville. The husband alleged through Attorney Thomas L. Dawson, of Rockville, that the wife had deserted him and their minor child when he objected to supporting her four sisters and brothers. The couple was married September 25, 1920, at Washington.

N. & W. Railroad Fights U. S. Suit

(Associated Press.)

A contest against the Government's attempt to collect $15,849,000 from it as excess earnings was instituted yesterday before the Interstate Commerce Commission by the Norfolk & Western Railway.

That company was ordered by the commission last month to pay over the sum as representing half of its total income for 1924 to 1926 in excess of 6 per cent on the valuation of its property.

In the protest the company said the commission had "arbitrarily" placed its value in 1926 at $379,500,000 and that the figure "was much less than the fair and lawful value of the railroad."

By its own calculation, it contended, the railroad was worth in that year "not less than $737,700,000."

In addition, the order to pay the $15,849,000 was asserted by the protest to be "based upon erroneous principles of law" and to "exceed the lawful power of the commission."

Old Naval Chief, Shernbec, Is Dead

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., March 13.—Henry Shernbec, former chief quartermaster, U. S. N., retired, last surviving member of a crew of 28 men which brought the old frigate Constitution from Newport at the conclusion of the Civil War, died at the United States Naval Hospital here today after an illness of over a month from complications due to the encroachments of age. He was 83. Shernbec enlisted in the Navy in 1864, during the Civil War, and took part in the capture of Fort Morgan at Mobile under Admiral Farragut in August of that year.

After bringing the Constitution from Newport Shernbec came to Annapolis and resided for the most part at Eastport ever since.

His funeral will take place from St. Mary's Catholic Church at 9 o'clock Monday morning.

Fight Promoter Shot in Roadhouse

Six Witnesses Seized After Fatal Affair in Anne Arundel County.

Baltimore, March 13 (A.P.).—Charles Valentine, 34, fight promoter, was fatally shot last night at a roadhouse near here and three young women and three men were held today as police tried to untangle the circumstances of his death.

Two of the six were in the roadhouse, police said, when Valentine was shot, although the place had been ordered closed by Ann Arundel County officers last fall.

Two others were arrested when they took the wounded man to a hospital. Their automobile was in a collision and a witness told police two unidentified men leaped out.

Woman Treated for Poisoning.

CURLEY RAPS FILMS AS MORAL HAZARDS

Average Pictures Injure Youth, Archbishop of Baltimore Says.

Baltimore, Md., March 13 (A.P.).—Archbishop Michael J. Curley today entered the battle over the State's ancient Sunday closing laws, in progress in the Legislature for weeks, with a statement of opposition to Sunday motion pictures.

"The average moving pictures presented to our American audiences," the Catholic prelate said in a statement, "are so full of salaciousness, and so destructive of moral standards, that they should not be shown to decent people on any day.

"Educating our youth is costing us millions. Immoral movies tear down what our schools are trying to build up."

A bill giving local option to Baltimore and the 23 counties on the enforcement of the so-called blue laws passed the House of Delegates this week and is now in the hands of a Senate committee.

Archbishop Curley's statement was endorsed by the Right Rev. Edward T. Helfenstein, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Maryland, and by the Rev. Robert Davids, executive secretary of the Baltimore Federation of Churches.

The Archbishop said he was well disposed to "clean and wholesome recreations" on Sunday, and even toward motion pictures, "if they are consistently clean."

MR. DENISON'S CASE.

Former Representative Edward E. Denison, of Illinois, stands acquitted of a charge that he brought a trunk laden with liquor into the United States from Panama. The jury required only one hour to agree that he was innocent. The prosecution failed to prove that the leaking baggage belonged to Mr. Denison. On the other hand, the jury was given evidence pointing to the conclusion that a trunk belonging to some one else had been sent to his office, either by mistake or by malicious intent.

In the light of developments at the trial the case appears to be a piece of bungling work on the part of prohibition agents. The leading witness for the Government was dismissed from the prohibition service after these charges against Mr. Denison were filed. Apparently the prosecution made no efforts to determine whether the leaking trunk was actually shipped from Panama by the congressman. Who is the actual owner of that trunk? The testimony suggests rather strongly that its shipment to Mr. Denison's office was a deliberate plot to discredit him in the public eye.

Irreparable injury was done to a man who has been found innocent by a competent jury. Mr. Denison was defeated for reelection last November, largely because these charges by prohibition agents were hanging over him. After the public pronounced judgment upon him, based on those charges, a jury finds him innocent.

The Prohibition Bureau ought to find out whether or not it has lent aid to a frameup against Mr. Denison. Trickery of that kind is not unknown in American politics. If unscrupulous interests are at work trying to discredit and embarrass members of Congress because of their views on prohibition the public ought to know about it and the offenders ought to be brought to justice. The logical outcome of this trial would be an investigation to determine whether there was such a conspiracy, and if so, who was responsible for it.

FEDERAL EMPLOYMENT SERVICE.

President Hoover has appointed John R. Alpine, former vice president of the American Federation of Labor, as special Assistant Secretary of Labor in charge of the Federal employment service. Mr. Alpine is charged with the duty of extending the Government's employment service. New divisions are to be established at once, and a system of cooperation with other public employment agencies will be worked out.

This action confirms the wisdom of Mr. Hoover in vetoing the Wagner bill for Federal and State cooperation in the maintenance of employment agencies. That measure would have left the Government with no employment service at this critical time. By vetoing the Wagner bill Mr. Hoover has been able to make use of the $500,000 made available in the second deficiency bill for immediate relief of jobless men. This will be in addition to the $380,000 that is available every year to carry on the work of connecting men with jobs. Instead of interminable delay, while State Legislatures discussed the merits of another encroachment upon their jurisdiction, the expansion of the employment service will be immediate. Activity will also be centered in those regions and trades where assistance is most needed.

One phase of the President's plan which gives special encouragement to the unemployed is the provision for an extensive study of the whole question of free public employment agencies in both the United States and abroad. Technological unemployment will be given special attention. When this study is complete the Labor Department will be able to make recommendations to Congress from a broad background of both theory and actual experience. In the meantime labor will receive the benefits of the emergency program expanded to a comprehensive basis.

WICKERSHAM EXPLAINS.

By interpreting the prohibition report of the National Law Enforcement Commission Chairman Wickersham has performed a national service. For weeks the public has labored under the delusion that the commission concluded wet and recommended dry. Mr. Wickersham vehemently denies that. Yet he admits that the report, which advised continuation of the present law with minor changes, has been a source of greater encouragement to the wets than to the drys.

Obviously, Mr. Wickersham is bewildered by the endless criticism that has been heaped upon the commission. The wets, ungrateful wretches, were not satisfied with the tomes of evidence indicating the failure of prohibition. They seem to have expected the commission to find reason in this hopeless state of affairs for changing the law. The drys, on the other hand, are so wrought up over the disclosure of corruption and widespread disregard of the law that they have not yet found time to thank the faithful members of the commission for holding on to their convictions.

No one who has a sentiment on prohibition could fail to find something in the Wickersham report to comfort him. Certainly the wets have no valid complaint. The commission has handed them more propaganda than they have been able to evolve in these ten years. The speakeasies continue to operate as before, or with a little more daring, and Mr. Raskob has launched a Nation-wide campaign in behalf of cheaper liquor.

The drys have the commission's recommendations as indisputable evidence that prohibition should go on. The law is already on their side; so is Congress. All that remains for them to do is to dry up the country's wet places, which do not cover the area of more than 48 States.

Lo! Only the authors of this discord are utterly without comfort.

PERSHING STOOD FIRM.

Gen. Pershing is being criticized in some quarters for the frank manner in which he is revealing in his memoirs the actual relations of the allies and America in the war. A correspondent to the New York Times laments the fact that Gen. Pershing emphasizes the constant friction between himself and the allied commanders. He fears that the French may be piqued at this honest account, and that Franco-American relations will suffer in consequence.

No one suggests, however, that Gen. Pershing's story of what took place is inaccurate. In true military fashion he has written down the events as they happened, without a surplus of words. His disclosure of French and British tactics in trying to break up the American Army is a distinct service to history. It is well that the people be informed of the struggle that was necessary to keep the A. E. F. together as a military unit and to prevent American soldiers from being cremated at the front before they were trained for war.

The British and French armies were fatigued and discouraged when American troops began landing in France. Germany was concentrating terrific pressure on the western front. Foch, Petain and Clemenceau were anxious only to get American troops into the war. In their feverish haste they would have pressed raw recruits into trench service had not Gen. Pershing stood against it like a rock of Gibraltar. They would have absorbed the American troops into French and British divisions, and there would have been no American Army in France.

The wisdom of Pershing's policy was manifest by subsequent events. American troops were not trained for service in foreign units. "Our organization," says Gen. Pershing, "was radically different from that of any of the allied armies, and we could not become imitators of methods which applied especially to armies in which initiative was more or less repressed by infinite attention to detail. * * * The highest efficiency could only be attained by adherence to our own doctrines, based upon thorough appreciation of the American temperament, qualifications and deficiencies." When the American troops went to the front as a unit they carried a new spirit into the campaign; they made an immediate impression on the enemy. Had they been diffused through the French and British armies the psychological effect of their presence at the front would have been lost. America's prestige in military combat would have suffered a severe blow.

Gen. Pershing's insistence upon holding the American troops together under their own command is one of the finest pieces of service that he performed for his country in France. It is well that the details of his struggle against frantic and selfish French and British generals and premiers are being made known.

NOT MORE LAW, BUT ENFORCEMENT.

Sentiment in favor of capital punishment is gaining strength in many States. The Legislature of Kansas has passed bills making first-degree murder and robbery with firearms capital offenses, although the State has not had an execution for more than 60 years. Michigan has not imposed the death penalty for more than a century, but that State will hold a referendum next month to determine whether capital punishment should be reinstated.

This is one answer of society to organized crime. It is part of the general movement to strengthen criminal laws. A few years ago the idea of rehabilitating prisoners was gaining a strong foothold, but since organized crime has made a mockery of justice in many parts of the country the people are demanding more stringent measures.

States that revive capital punishment in hope of preventing crimes of violence will probably be disappointed. Statistics do not show that the death penalty deters homicides. Arizona restored capital punishment in 1918 and has experienced a steady increase in murders. Missouri, Tennessee, Washington and Oregon have had similar experience. Changes in social conditions, and not the revived statutes, were the cause. Oklahoma, where capital punishment is imposed, has a homicide rate almost twice as high as that of its neighbor, Kansas, where executions are unknown. The reverse is true in some other neighboring States.

The number of persons guilty of homicide who are executed is infinitesimal, even in those States with the most rigorous laws. The chances of escaping the electric chair are so good that criminals do not stop to calculate the risk. Lewis A. Lawes, warden of Sing Sing Prison, says that capital punishment in the United States has been practically abolished through indifferent enforcement.

The question that States are called upon to decide, therefore, is not one of frightening criminals into obedience to law, but one of meting out just punishment for the taking of human life. Is it better for society to be rid of a murderer for all time, or to support him for life at the expense of the taxpayers and allow him to breed prison riots?

The question of coping with organized crime is not one of changing the law so much as enforcing it. No law, however rigorous, can be effective unless it is enforced. What the States need most of all is efficient detection and more swift and certain punishment of crime.

Senator Jim Ham Lewis suggests that the Democratic national convention can not adopt a plank on the liquor question without meddling in the business of the States. What does he mean by "business" and "States?"

Gen. Pershing complains that the British would not lend him tanks for the St. Mihiel offensive. Judging by the way the enemy skedaddled from that sector, what he needed was race horses instead of tanks.

The Arkansas Senate insists that Joe Robinson should be nominated for President; but maybe it's only filibustering.

LIFE IN MOSCOW

By HENRY WALES,
In Moscow Dispatch to the Chicago Tribune.

Life is no sinecure in Russia, even for foreigners. Besides the ever-existent shortage in food and clothing and other supplies, there is the wrangle over hotel accommodations. Worse than all, in winter there is the cold problem.

Under the new edict to conserve the fuel supply it is prohibited to maintain the temperature in hotel and other public rooms higher than 53 degrees Fahrenheit. And besides that, the local organizations give prizes to janitors who make the best showing in economizing on fuel.

There is no thermometer in my room, but as I write I can see my breath every time I exude, and stiff icy blasts penetrate through the cracks in the putty that seal up the edges of the inner set of double windows in the room.

The fuel crisis is caused by transportation problems. The authorities find it difficult to haul in the vast amount of wood necessary to heat the capital, and on top of that labor for cutting and splitting the logs is scarce, even with wood fetching $31.25 a cord, delivered.

Just three hotels exist here for foreigners, and like all other property, they belong to the state and are operated by managers for the Soviet government. They are the Savoy, where I am; the Grand, a huge structure facing the main gateway to Red square and opposite the Kremlin, and the Metropole, another large building in front of the Opera House.

All three are jammed, and have long waiting lists. The only way to get in is through government intervention. The Savoy and the Grand are packed with American engineers, some Germans, and a portion of the staff of the British Embassy. The latter are here waiting for the renovation of their official quarters. The engineers are waiting for a break in the weather to proceed to the various projects on which they are employed in the interior.

During the winter the extreme cold paralyzes all building construction, and work on the different units of the five-year plan can not start again until April.

I wired ahead for reservations and friends in Moscow had called at the hotel to arrange accommodations, but when I arrived with my pile of baggage, there was nothing doing. I finally obtained a cot in an unheated room for the first night, and it was fortunate I had my own blankets to reinforce the bed covering, or I should have frozen.

Next day the foreign office officials at the Narkomindel telephoned to the manager, asking him to give me quarters, and I received a nice room with alcove and bath; price, $15 a day.

Things come high in Soviet Russia; a pot of tea without milk or even lemon, but with plenty of sugar and hot water, costs 67 cents. That's all I take for breakfast, as the bread is nothing to brag about and you can get put in jail for even asking for toast. And the floor waiter says there is no jam.

Ham and eggs, three eggs and mighty little ham, costs $1.75, and a pot of fire coffee and watered condensed milk is 75 cents. The coffee has a quaint flavor of chocolate, which is extremely original for Java, and may be due to the fact that cocoa is made in the same pot for people addicted to that.

Downstairs the hotel had opened a swell restaurant on the premises formerly occupied by Dr. Hammer, the American who obtained the pencil monopoly in Russia just after the revolution and who was recently bought out by the government. The room has been decorated tastefully, the head waiter wears a black suit and the ordinary waiters wear white jackets. An orchestra plays during luncheon, which starts at 3 o'clock.

Caviar costs $2.90, which is more than it is priced at in Ciro's in Paris and about the same as at the Savoy, London. Other dishes are more reasonable, especially in view of the large size orders which are served. Soup, fish and meat, the latter almost exclusively in the form of weiner schnitzel, and a glass of tea, with tip, come to about $5. No tips at the frontier and only a modest gratuity for the sleeping car porter, but here the regulation 10 per cent for service or you better not come again.

For dessert there is jelly at 75 cents, or a tasty roly-poly sort of cake with jam between the layers and sugar sifted on top that costs $1.

Wine and other drinks are expensive. A tiny little cafee or vodka costs 3 rubles and 90 kopecks, just under $2. This is a good deal more than in Le Maisonette Russe in Paris. Reislinger is priced in the Grand Hotel restaurant at $25 a bottle. Even the local Russian wines from the Crimea, heavy, sweetish stuff, cost $11 a bottle and up.

Hotel and restaurant prices have nearly trebled in the three years since my former visit, but no kicks are registered. Those who can afford it are glad to get food and drink at any price.

The tricks of the liquor trade are to be studied in connection with a new enforcement drive. Big rum profits buy faster motor boats, bigger automobiles and more machine guns than enforcement officials can afford.

The Prince of Wales bewails the lack of publicity for the British Trade Exposition in Buenos Aires, thereby securing about a million dollars, 200,000 pounds worth, free.

Senator Norris will compromise if he is just allowed to dictate the policies and name the candidates for the old parties.

Whether it will be taken in the nature of a suggestion to one side or a warning to the other in this country, it must be recorded that the Labor party of Great Britain has excommunicated Sir Oswald Mosley. It seems Sir Oswald had not resigned from the Labor party, but had launched a declaration of war against its tariff policy and was seeking funds and candidates for a new organization. It has a familiar sound somehow.

With $3,000,000,000 a year being spent by Uncle Sam to keep 30,000,000 pupils in school every year, the "I seens" and "I dones" should be entirely eliminated by 1999. P. H.

GOLD-BEARING DUCKS.

"Thar's gold in them thar ducks," so say the Oregonians who shoot big fat mallards on the Gardner preserve of Sauvie's Island near Portland. Frank Troeh, world-famous trapshooter of Portland, drew a nice fat mallard hen in his bag. She had given sport and she promised a tasty meal, but lo and behold she also produced gold, gold nuggets, five of them. Stowed in her crop along with the usual collection of food grinding pebbles were five gold nuggets, not large, but pure gold, ranging in size up to an eighth of an inch in diameter.

Now duck hunters in that vicinity, according to the Pacific Sportsman, are both carefully cleaning all gizzards and wondering where Frank's mallard scooped up those virgin gold nuggets during the summer, because where she summered in the far North there is free gold. Now for a gold bearing duck with an identifying band on its leg. What if a Biological Survey identification leg band should start another gold rush to rival the days of '49 or the great hegira to the Yukon.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

ARGUMENT.

The dandelion to the daisy said:
"There is no Heaven for you.
Who would be crowned when he is dead
Must wear a golden hue."

The timid daisy answered low:
"In spotless white we're dressed
That all upon the earth may know
God loves the daisies best!"

A cynic bee who passed that way
Said: "What poor fools are these!
It makes no difference how they pray,
Heaven is reserved for bees.

"We shall in glory stand arrayed
When this brief life is gone.
Flowers are but things which God has made
For us to feed upon!"

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

MY Dear Louise:

In the Florida city where this is written, I had seen no evidence of liquor, either in the daytime or at night, nor any conduct unbecoming to an officer and a gentleman, until I stopped to hear an orchestra this evening and came upon a public dance.

Most of the dancers were young people, many of them from small towns miles away, and at least a third of the boys were drinking. A few of them, though the night was young, were beginning to be glassy eyed and maudlin.

The scene reminded me of our frequent discussion of public dances.

None of the girls seemed to be drinking, but I knew they would be urged to drink. In the cars between dances, or on the way home after midnight, boys normally decent but now bereft of every noble instinct would produce flasks and repeat over and over, with the silly persistence of the addled: "Aw, be a sport"—which means, being translated: "Fuddle your brain, as I have, so you can forget your standards of decency and become easier to handle."

That is my objection to public dances. It isn't that public dancing is wrong—any more than public walking and riding are wrong. The wrong consists in voluntary association, on terms of social equality, with people you would be ashamed to have in your home.

Perhaps there are public dances attended only by well-bred and the respectable, but I haven't seen any of that kind. When you let down the bars to admit the sheep, there is no way to keep out the swine.

I am not a crank. I am glad you have learned to dance. It is good for you. And I think there was no harm in liquor as it was used by gentlemen when a decanter adorned the sideboard and good manners were still in fashion.

But you can't lie down with dogs without getting fleas; and to share the social intimacy of a dance with ill-bred youngsters who aren't ashamed to be drunk in the presence of decent girls is to condone and thus to share the ethical standards of the gutter.

Decency isn't gone out of America, my dear. When people say all girls neck and all boys drink, they mean all of a certain class. There is much ten-cent-store jewelry, but there are many genuine stones, also.

You can have more fun and make more whoopee than anybody and still keep your standards high. You needn't be vulgar in order to be happy. This land is full of decent, happy youngsters who keep free of dirt.

I don't want you to miss any fun, but I want you to get your share without paying too much for it.

As a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, so a company of people is no more respectable than the worst rotter it admits to fellowship.

The safest plan, where you haven't the authority to keep out drunks and other undesirables, is to keep yourself out. Love, DAD.

Encouraging Blocs.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Although called to formulate a legislative program for the next Congress, the conference of self-styled "progressives" in Washington showed from the outset that its avowed purpose was misleading, or at least inadequate. Such a heterogeneous group, composed of representatives of both the Republican and Democratic left wings and others who scorn either party label, could not be expected to submit proposals that might be bundled together and offered as the program of any faction united in thought and purpose. The conference served as a clearing house for a mass of theories, criticisms and complaints which have only one thing definitely in common—the fact that they are all minority views.

From this standpoint it is evident that the conference program, such as it is, may materially increase the activities and probably also the number of congressional blocs.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Senator Hansbrough Becomes an Astronomy Fan at 82—Evidence of a Pliant Mind.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with the greatest interest the reminiscences of former Senator Hansbrough as narrated by Mr. Barbee and published in the last five issues of the Sunday edition of The Washington Post. Interesting and valuable side lights are thrown on vital historical events by a keen mind. Perhaps some inscrutable power foresaw that after 20 years in Congress the senator could render a still larger service, if defeated at the polls, as he was, and thus made a representative of all the people of the Nation. Only a militant independent could become such a senator at large. Certainly the enlarged perspective shown in these illuminating interviews could never have been realized in the strenuous life of a senator who is more or less dependent on party machinery for continuance in office.

One important phase of Senator Hansbrough's mind was not revealed in these articles, one that is the best evidence of its capacity, and especially of its pliancy in spite of its 80-odd years. Cato is said to have learned Greek at 80, and Goethe is known to have completed his masterpiece, "Faust," when past 80 years. We recognize that these achievements indicate exceptional intelligence. It should, therefore, interest all who have enjoyed the senator's reflections on political events to know that he took up the study of astronomy for the first time two years ago, and since then has not only become greatly interested in the subject, but now in his 84th year has more knowledge of the subject than most young men and women who graduate from our colleges today. Intrinsically that is a greater triumph than is usually attained by leaders in politics.

O. J. SCHUSTER.

Why United States Is Revolution-Proof—People Do Not Believe in Bayonet Rule.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Making the United States revolution-proof was a subject discussed in a recent lecture by the Commissioner of Education, Dr. William John Cooper. This country is revolution-proof today for the very reasons that once caused it to revolt—the sure sense of justice and fair play that always can be depended upon to enlist the support of an overwhelming majority of the American people whenever they are aroused to express themselves on a vital question.

The people of the United States have an ingrained respect for civil authority. It is in this regard that, with their Anglo-Saxon background, they differ so radically from their Latin-American brothers. And it is the lack of this respect for constituted authority, unless it is well supported by bayonets, that is responsible for many of the revolutionary overturns of government in South America the past year.

Through the centuries the forbears of these peoples have known only governments that could enforce their decrees with military power. There are striking examples of disregard for law observance in this country today, but they never reach the magnitude of an overthrow of government, not even State or municipal.

There is never so much as a thought in this country today of not abiding by the will of the majority as expressed at the polls. Any attempt to overthrow a state or national executive by a disappointed candidate who would seize the office by force would dissolve party lines instantly and rally undivided support to duly elected officials.

The citizens of the United States do break laws, but they respect the principles of civil authority and they know how to wait for the next election to secure revenge on political enemies.

PRESTON O'SHEA.

Employers Should Not Cut Wages or Dodge Pension Systems if They Expect to Head Off Radicalism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has recently been a tendency among industrial and commercial enterprises to take advantage of the period of depression and unwarrantly decrease salaries, with replacements of loyal and efficient employes by the substitution of less experienced but none the less youthful persons, principally to create a revised wage standard, but also to avoid the payment of pensions.

Of course, there are instances where reductions are necessary and unavoidable, but to take advantage of the situation to lower the living standards, or, selfishly deprive the loyal employe of an opportunity to enjoy the reward of service, is subject to criticism, as it is contrary to the ideals of Americanism and the expressed thought of our most able minds.

As the concerns or individuals who create unemployment are among the first to complain if forces opposed to constituted government are permitted to survive, it behooves them to practice the principles of American ideals and observe the rule of reason, if they expect corresponding treatment in return.

REFLECTING POOL PROPOSED BY LYNN

A long pool in which the magnificent dome of the Capitol will be reflected, red oak and other trees, flowers, a system of sprinkling fountains to water the growing things, sidewalks about the squares and cutting through them—this will be the first sight the newcomer has of the National Capitol under plans which David Lynn, Architect of the Capitol, has prepared for development of the Capitol Plaza.

The sprinkler system will be installed underground. It will be used to water the flowers and grass and trees on the plaza between Union Station and the Capitol and along the east front of the Capitol. Mr. Lynn called for bids for installing the network of sprinklers yesterday. The bids are to be opened on March 31. They will not be continuously spraying water, Mr. Lynn explained. Their purpose will be to supply necessary water to the grass and flowers and trees, but they will make a striking spectacle when in operation, Mr. Lynn believes.

Contracts for the laying of the sidewalks also are to be let soon. Bids for these are to be opened on March 25. The total of sidewalks calls for about 14,000 square yards of concrete sidewalks.

100 Highway Officials To Study Cuban Road

MacDonald, treasurer. The new roadway is the largest single highway contract ever carried to completion. It is 703 miles long and runs the entire length of the island.

Lawyers Prepare To Honor Holmes

(United Press.)

More than a score of thriving lawyers whose first contact with the courts came as secretaries to Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, oldest and most liberal of Supreme Court justices, were preparing yesterday to gather here to honor him.

Their meeting, set for tomorrow, will come just a week after Justice Holmes celebrated his ninetieth birthday, and those who worked for him in the past 27 years will make the occasion something of a birthday celebration. They will present him with a full-length oil portrait of himself, the one done by Charles Hopkinson which is now hanging in Harvard Law School.

Each year Justice Holmes selects as his aid a Harvard law graduate. Usually it is the leader of the class, for the honor is much sought after. During that year the young barrister gets the additional experience and the influence of Justice Holmes' vitalizing personality.

PRESIDENT APPROVES CURB ON OIL IMPORTS

annually. Negotiations with the companies were conducted by Secretary Lamont under instructions from President Hoover.

Wilbur, as chairman of the Federal Oil Conservation Board, said all the importers except the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana had pledged curtailment. That company, he added, had shown a willingness to help, but had found a reduction agreement might conflict with contracts it had.

"The Mellon interests," Secretary Wilbur said, referring to the Gulf Oil Co., "and the Standard of New Jersey are among those which have agreed to harmonize imports with domestic restrictions as have all other importing companies with the exception of the Standard of Indiana."

Secretary Wilbur said he had been advised informally the Royal Dutch Shell Co. and the Pan-American Petroleum Co. would join in the move.

The voluntary curb affects primarily South American oil produced chiefly in Venezuela and Columbia, the two largest exporters to the United States.

Secretary Wilbur said the Government had no power to negotiate a formal agreement with the companies nor could they under existing laws agree with each other. He added that each had agreed voluntarily to reduce imports.

Oklahoma City, March 13 (A.P.).—Gov. W. H. Murray expressed satisfaction today at the announcement that major importing companies had agreed to reduce oil imports several million barrels yearly, but said representatives of the governors of oil States would go ahead with their plans for a conference in Washington March 25.

Gov. Murray is sponsoring a measure to cancel charters of companies operating in Oklahoma which import oil or its derivates.

"We'll go right ahead with my bill, and so will the other States," he said.

"If the importers keep the agreement, I think it is fair and just for the American producer to make proportionate sacrifice. It is unfair for the American producer to continue to reduce production * * * while major companies continue their flood of oil from abroad."

Austin, Tex., March 13 (A.P.).—Gov. Ross S. Sterling late today voiced a severe criticism of the State Railroad Commission's "hands off" policy up to today in the new East Texas oil fields.

The governor said that the unrestricted flow in East Texas was the reason crude prices had fallen to such a low level. He made the observation in confirming reports he had drafted a bill to take oil and gas regulation away from the railroad commission.

Under the governor's plan, a conservation commission of three, appointed by the governor at a salary of $7,500 each, would regulate oil and gas conservation.

"The existing conservation laws are adequate," Gov. Sterling said. "The railroad commission either can not enforce them because they have too many other duties, or they will not." He pointed out that the railroad commission had numerous other responsibilities, including regulation of and establishment of rates for railroads, buses and trucks.

Wales Reaches Argentina On Eve of Big British Show

$20,000,000 Exposition to Include Among Other Exhibits, Speedboat in Which Segrave Died and His Motor Car, Which Set Record in Florida.

Argentina, March 13 (A.P.).—The Union Jack flew today in Palermo Park from the fastest craft of earth and sea and sky—crowd-catchers in a $20,000,000 exposition designed to bring Britain back to preeminence in Argentina's foreign trade.

The motor of the British plane which won the 1930 Schneider Cup race, the speedboat in which Maj. Henry O. D. Segrave died after setting a world record, and the motor car, Golden Arrow, in which he traveled to a speed mark on a Florida Beach were mounted in the exhibition halls—symbols of Britain's claim for restoration to its long-wanted place as Argentina's favorite merchant abroad.

After years of studying Argentina's foreign trade needs and months of preparation, the exposition was on the eve of its opening tonight and the Prince of Wales was ready to fling wide its doors tomorrow. He came by airplane from Mal Del Plaza this afternoon. Emissaries of commerce, bravery, from the United States looked on with interest to see if the exposition would restore Britain to the top trade rank held by the United States since the World War.

British-made goods in the great trade show ranged from the largest locomotive in South America to jewels of raindrop size.

The exposition was organized by the British Chamber of Commerce. The British government sent the Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, to open it, and warships to maneuver in the harbor and send planes winging over the park grounds. Several dominions joined Canada in its maple-leafed hall, showed $50,000 worth of pictures of Canadian scenes.

Sales of products started early. The Argentine navy bought a six-ton bronze propeller intended for display, and a 450-horsepower Diesel engine was sold to a Buenos Aires brewery.

COMING HERE

DR. HUGH THOMPSON KERR, Of Pittsburgh, moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, who will be the guest of the Presbyterians of Washington on March 23.

EARLY METHODIST HYMNS TO BE SUNG

Lantern Slides Flash Them Tomorrow Night to Petworth Audience.

One of the things Protestantism owes to the Wesleys is a hymnology, though many of its most familiar and best-loved hymns of this generation were written by two Catholic clergymen—Cardinal Newman and Dr. Frederick Faber.

It is difficult to see how Methodism could have won its greatest triumphs without its hymns, some of which are to be found in the hymn books of every denomination, except the Catholics. Not all of them were written by the Wesleys, either. Many of those which were used in former years in primitive communities came from the heart and pen of other poets and composers.

A Methodist living in Brightwood Park has a library of over 400 of those old collections of hymns, said to be one of the finest in America. The Rev. Robert Louis Wood, pastor of Petworth Methodist Church, found in a mountain home in West Virginia a number of old hymnals, which went back to the Revolution.

Inspired by his love for these old hymns, Mr. Wood has arranged to devote the whole of his evening service tomorrow to a song service at which nothing but these early Methodist hymns will be sung. Few of them are in the hymnals of this day, so the minister has had them photographed on lantern slides and will flash them on a screen for his congregation to see and use.

Leading the singing at this "Old Hymns Service" will be a chorus of 200 voices, one-half of them women. The minister, himself, no mean singer, having been trained in the country churches where the preacher had to line out the hymn, will "h'ist" more than one tune for his people.

Old things will be made new at this service.

METHODIST CHURCH TO HAVE CONFERENCE

Unusual Meeting to Be Held Tomorrow at Mount Vernon Place.

A conference is not an ordinary thing in a Methodist Church. In other denominations this is called a congregational meeting. John Wesley used every good thing he could find in organizing his church, but he centered all the interest in the preacher. The minister stood at the center of things.

That explains the simple church buildings, the plain and unadorned pulpits, the absence of altars and reading desks, crosses and lights, the lack of a ritual and a good many other things that in times past made the Wesleyans "a peculiar people."

However, they are getting away from all that. Methodists have a ritual and are using it. The pew is vieing in interest with the pulpit. The people are more and more getting a voice in the management of their affairs.

A prominent Methodist minister in this city, who belongs to the northern half of the church, told this writer that he had served one church in which the charter expressly provided that only males over 21 years of age could vote, and that every action of the trustees had to be ratified by these voting males.

That, however, is a rare exception, and would hardly be tolerated now. The women, too, have the vote, and Methodism could not get along without its women.

All of the foregoing points to the fact that the church conference to be held at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church South tomorrow morning will be an unusual and important meeting, for the larger affairs of the church will be discussed at that meeting. That will be an event in that church.

Long Pastorate.

The Right Rev. Mgr. J. R. Matthews is celebrating the thirty-eighth anniversary of his pastorate at St. Cyprian's Catholic Church.

Mgr. Matthews has made known the teachings of Catholicism to thousands of other members of the colored race and has made the Church better known and esteemed by them.

During his pastorate he has built the stone church, rectory, parochial school and parish hall.

The anniversary ceremonies began last Sunday, when the entire membership of 550 or more men of the St. Cyprian's Holy Name Society received Holy Communion for the intention of their pastor.

Visions of the City of God

At the end of the fourth century and the beginning of the fifth, Rome was staggering to its fall. Sacked by Alaric and his hordes and sacked by the Vandals, at last the horrible collapse came with the reign of the last puppet emperor. In such a world, with the hand of blighting change heavy upon it, Augustine lived.

The torrid, tempestuous vices of the period appealed to the hot currents of passion which surged in his arteries. Into his brilliant, untamed soul the sins of the time bit with treacherous, angry teeth. He had the mind of a king, but his unbridled nature made him a slave. Then came the golden hour when his contact with the vitalities of the Christian religion made a new man of him.

The new mastery of Jesus Christ gathered all his wandering, lustful desires away from evil, and drew them in pure gladness about this new and noble and commanding allegiance. The fires of passion were put out by the waters of eternal life which began to leap fountain-like within him and to flow like vital torrents from him. The sense of his own failure and the sense of the divine aid made him a Christian and one of the greatest evangelists of all time. The grace of Christ within him raised him in defiant victory above his times.

When the timbers of the mighty fabric of the Roman Empire were breaking apart with sickening crash, this powerful man found an invisible home for his great spirit in the creative grace of the living God. And this spiritual house in which he dwelt so securely enabled hm to believe in "the city which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God." So when Rome was tumbling into decay Augustine was writing his great book "The City of God."

These snatches from his prayers reveal his loyalties and the secret of his strength: "Send down, O Lord, send down into my heart Thy precious odors, that I may be ravished with the fragrance of my heavenly spouse;" "Let the light of Thy countenance shine through every corner of my heart, that under Thy government and conduct I may proceed from strength to strength."

FAMED COMMUNION SERVICE TO BE USED

Cup Presidents Drank From Offered Worshipers at Covenant-First.

Two very old Washington churches will hold unusual service tomorrow. At the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church Holy Communion will be served from the silver communion service which is an heirloom of the historic old First Church, dating back to 1822. And at the Georgetown Presbyterian Church its 151st birthday will be duly celebrated.

Presbyterians may dispute, as they often have in the past, as to whether the First, or New York Avenue, is the older, but none of them denies the primacy to old Georgetown, which, at least, is the oldest Presbyterian Church in the District of Columbia. There was a Lutheran Church at Georgetown before the Presbyterians organized their first congregation, and old Rock Creek Episcopal Church is even older than that. So the antiquarians say.

It was a great event in the history of this community when the Rev. Stephen Bloomer Balch, on Sunday morning, March 15, 1790, opened his Bible and broke the bread of life to a small band of Scotchmen in old Georgetown. He was a truly remarkable man. And so was Dr. Brackenridge, who organized the old First Church; and so was Dr. Laurie, the clerk in the Treasury, who organized the church, of which New York Avenue is the lineal descendant.

Dr. Balch married Mistress Peggy O'Neal to her first husband, Lieut. Timberlake, of the Navy, who killed himself in the Mediterranean. And then he married her again to Senator John H. Eaton, of Tennessee, which ceremony came near killing Old Hickory, though he approved of the marriage. At that time Old Hickory was worshiping at Dr. Laurie's church, just like any ordinary member of the church, though he did not then belong to any church.

It is related, on the best of authority, that the junior minister of Dr. Laurie's kirk, made faces at Mistress Peggy O'Neal, after her marriage to Old Hickory's friend, and that intrepid Scotch-Irishman sent for him to come to the White House and demanded of him that he prove his whispering charges against the character of the lady. Unable to do so, Old Hickory gave the dominie a piece of his mind and went no more to Dr. Laurie's church, but transferred his presence to the old First, thus establishing a precedent which all of the Presbyterian Presidents, except Benjamin Harrison and Woodrow Wilson, followed.

So when the communicants gather about the Lord's Table tomorrow at the Covenant First Church they will have the satisfaction of eating from the plate from which that famous man and his famous successors in the White House ate, and drinking from the cup which their lips touched.

This is by no means the oldest communion set owned by a Presbyterian Church in this general community, however. Presbyterianism in America was cradled at Upper Marlboro, Md., where the first congregation was organized by Col. Ninian Beall, who has a monument in Georgetown. To that congregation Queen Anne gave a beautiful silver communion set, which is now more than 200 years old. It was moved to Bladensburg, when the church was moved there from Upper Marlboro; and on the decadence of that parish, the church being moved to Hyattsville, the precious old communion set went with it.

That relic is kept in a vault in one of the Hyattsville banks. It is probably the most precious relic belonging to American Presbyterianism. As Old Hickory worshipped on occasion at Bladensburg, it is probable that he took communion from that service.

George Washington may also have done so, for Episcopalian though he was, he was no narrow sectarian, and he thought highly of the Presbyterians. Did he not often "lie" with his friend, Col. John Carlyle, founder of the old Presbyterian Meeting House in Alexandria, toward which Washington contributed? And did he not say, that if all the colonies went back on him, he would fall back into the Valley of Virginia and gather up an army of Scotch Presbyterians and whip the British with it?

It certainly is too bad that the Presbyterians do not write their own history!—D. R. B.

Fultz Bible Class Sponsors Concert

G.W.U. Clubs Will Sing on Friday at Church of United Brethren.

The Fultz Bible Class of the Memorial Church of the United Brethren in Christ is sponsoring a joint concert by the Men's and Girls' Glee Clubs of George Washington University, to be held in the auditorium of the church at North Capitol and R streets on Friday evening, at 8 o'clock. Dr. Robert Howe Harmon is director, Miss Grace Ruble Harmon, accompanist, and Miss Jean Westbrook, violinist, assisting artist. There will be songs by the Men's Glee Club, the Girls' Glee Club and by the combined clubs; also violin solos by Miss Westbrook, and pianologues by Miss Harmon.

It will be remembered that in a contest in which the glee clubs of the ranking universities of the country participated, the George Washington University Glee Club won the honors. This will be an unusual opportunity for the music loving public to hear this outstanding club, with the Girls' Club as an added feature.

The Bible class sponsoring this entertainment and concert is the men's class of the church so long served by the Rev. Charles E. Fultz, assistant chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Masons in the District of Columbia.

Bible Classes to Hold United Services Again

One hundred and thirty men, representing the Bible class of fifteen Washington churches, attended the special services at the Calvary Methodist Church last Sunday night. It was an unusual and very impressive service when this group of earnest men walked down the aisle in a body.

Tomorrow night the men will again have charge of the service. Mr. E. E. Ingle will lead the devotions, Dr. A. A. Cheney will read from the Scripture and Dr. H. M. Dudley will lead the singing. The Rev. Mark Depp will preach a special sermon.

Women Evangelists Draw Large Crowds

The California evangelists, the Misses Amy Lee Stockton and Rita Gould, are said to be drawing capacity congregations at the Metropolitan Baptist Church at the revival in progress there. Dr. John Compton Ball, the minister, says he has never in all his long pastorate seen such interest manifested.

Miss Stockton is doing the preaching and Miss Gould leads the singing. Services will be held every evening next week, except Saturday.

Evangelist Palmer Adds to Church Roll

The Rev. Ray Palmer, Washington evangelist, has returned to Washington after a two-weeks' evangelistic campaign in Parkersburg, W. Va., where he conducted a series of services at the First Baptist Church in that city.

More than 50 new members were added to the church roll following the close of the services, where the Rev. Mr. Palmer preached twice daily. Following a short rest period at his home here, the Rev. Mr. Palmer will conduct another series of meetings at Crisfield, Md.

Vacationists Find Georgia Is Charming

Congress Members May Be Found There in No Mean Number.

Southern trails seem to have concentrated in Augusta, Ga., where an "extra session of Congress" apparently is under way at the Bonair Vanderbilt. For when Representative Robert H. Clancy, of Michigan, and Mr. Frederick N. Zihlman, of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, taxied down at the Augusta airport on Thursday they were met by Senator Joseph R. Grundy, of Pennsylvania, and Senator and Mrs. Hamilton F. Kean, of New Jersey, who recently reached the Southern resort. Miss Margaret Grundy also is at the Partridge Hotel with her brother.

The "Cracker" State has been the Mecca of northern society groups this year, many from the Capital, from Boston and other Atlantic Coast cities selecting the enchanting islands near its coast for their winter holiday. Mrs. Adams, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, is at Cumberland Island, which lies off the coast of Georgia. She will be in the South for a week or two while the Secretary is in the Canal Zone.

Another devotee of the Georgia playground is Mr. John Marshall, of Washington, who frequently goes down to the New Cloister on Sea Island Beach off the coast. Mr. Howard Coffin also "likes his Georgia," preferring the island of St. Simons, where the fishing is superb.

Mrs. F. Lamont Belin has returned from New York, where she spent several days.

Col. and Mrs. George H. Paddock will return to the Martinique today from St. Augustine, Fla., where they have spent three months.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THE electrical transcription people—those who broadcast by means of records—stole a march on the chains yesterday, when Scott Howe Bowen, of New York, presented a gigantic governmental broadcasting program to Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur and a committee of Army, Navy, Agriculture, Labor, Commerce and other departmental representatives.

To show the officials the possibilities of records and how they might be used effectively by the Government, a special broadcast was put on by Station WMAL, under the direction of Milton Baker, which was heard by those attending the conference at the Interior Department.

It was the suggestion of Mark O. Prentiss, representative of Mr. Bowen, who has been working on the proposition for several months, that script broadcasts be replaced with records. For instance, the Department of Agriculture now sends to various stations throughout the country series of scripts, usually read by an announcer, the effectiveness of which depends largely upon the reading.

The records would be made carefully in a special laboratory in Washington and sent by mail under Government frank to the stations. By thus replacing manuscripts with records a uniform presentation might be given.

Mr. Bowen suggested that there be a national hour also, sponsored by the Government, distributed by stations throughout the country by means of records prepared in Washington for the purpose of acquainting Americans with the functions of the various Government departments, such as the Bureau of Chemistry, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, the Bureau of Public Health and other interesting Federal activities.

Declaring that about all people think of when the Government is mentioned is prohibition and tax collections, Mr. Prentiss remarked that such a series of broadcasts as contemplated would show them that Uncle Sam is doing other things, too.

THE Wilkins Coffee Orchestra will delay their program for an hour tonight in order that Washingtonians may hear the story of news gathering by the Associated Press (WRC, 7:30 p. m.). The Wilkins Orchestra will replace the Mayflower period at 8:30 o'clock.

Having received permission from the Federal Radio Commission, the plan for synchronizing Stations WBAL and WTIC, which share time on the 1,060-kilocycle channel, with the wave length of Station WJZ, New York, will become effective Monday. The interesting fact to Washington listeners is that WBAL will be on the air for a full broadcasting day every day after Monday. Whenever WBAL's signal fails to come in at the regular place on the dial, the listener may turn to the point where WJZ is usually received and continue with the WBAL program.

For an hour, beginning at 11:30 o'clock tonight, the regular WRC Saturday evening entertainment will be replaced by a special program, inaugurating stations WDAY, Fargo and KFYR, Bismarck, N. Dak., as members of the NBC chain. Senator Gerald P. Nye will make a short address. Entertainers include Amos 'n' Andy, Vaughn de Leath, Phil Cook, Little Jack Little and many others with Graham McNamee, m. c.

THE great care nowadays exercised before each program goes on the air is responsible for broadcasts running smoothly, Frank M. Russell, of the NBC, said yesterday. However, it was not always thus.

President Hoover was once kept waiting 15 minutes in order to broadcast. This occurred at a convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The meeting was scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock, the President speaking at 9 o'clock, but the program preliminary to the President's address was finished at 8:45, 15 minutes earlier than anticipated. The Chief Executive was ushered onto the platform, the Marine Band played "Hail to the Chief," and 4,000 people in the audience waited to hear the President.

Announcers and engineers acted quickly. Members of the President's party were immediately informed that radio facilities were not available at the moment and the President was asked to hold up his talk. This he consented to do, saving the day for the broadcasters.

USUALLY when the President speaks from the White House the utmost quiet surrounds the Chief Executive, but on one occasion there was noise in the background of the President's talk. Strains of music were heard. Investigation disclosed that the President was entertaining members of the Supreme Court and that at the moment of the President's talk a concert was being given in an adjoining room. This was where the music originated.

Paris, March 13.

WELL, I must say that collars and cuffs have found their place under the sun at last, and it's exactly because they deserve it, nothing else! Because collars and cuffs have grown up to say the least, and when they appear on a dress or a coat this season, it's "quelquechose."

Collar and cuff sophistication lies mainly in hand-work. This summer a collar and cuff or a so-called lingerie touch on a frock often takes a woman who is very expert at this kind of work, in fact who makes a living at it, three or four entire days to do. Naturally, with such a set one must wear the simplest kind of a dress as to trimming, but one that is very elegant in cut. Often the cut of the dress is directly inspired by the collar and cuff, or vice versa. In fact, more than often, I should say, always—because the day is past when anything is put on a dress the last minute, as a sort of an afterthought. Everything is planned, everything follows in line and rhythm, and that, my dahrlings, is modern.

And altogether too highbrow for this collom—so back to our collars and cuffs! There was the black dress, for instance, at Worth, with cuffs and no collar, the cuffs all embroidered in an all-over design, and then the material cut right out from under, leaving an openwork embroidered effect that was simply delightful. There are the old organdie collars, all pleated in a way that defies a second pleating, meaning one wearing and then a new collar.

And although you can't really call this a collar and cuff set, Jenny had a darling lingerie touch which consisted of two chrysanthemums threaded through two button holes right in front of the bodies, and matched with cuff links made out of two chrysanthemums in just the way cuff links are made and just a little smaller than those at the point of the front decolletage. These chrysanthemums are made of chiffon, the edge of each petal slightly reinforced to stiffen them. Sometimes they are two pastel colors but they always distinctly contrast the dress, of course.

So you see how much thought and work is given to collars and cuffs and lingerie touches this season? So if you would be a lovely lady and look oh, ever so elegant and extravagant, get out the sewing box and start fluttering your pretty hands around little bits of this and that, in your spare moments.

* * * *

But first of all, use one of those spare moments to send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet telling you how to make a whole family of collars and cuffs and lingerie touches—all of the very smartest ones that are being worn in Paris. We'll promise you that they're like nothing you ever saw before or even thought of and that they honestly have to be seen to be appreciated, no foolin'.

* * * *

The best way to describe it is to call it a bolero vest. Because it's a bolero, but it is to be worn as a vest under a tailored suit, and one doesn't wear any blouse under it at all, despite the fact that the edge hangs free just above the top of the skirt, as any well-behaved bolero always does.

It's a specialty of the house of Jenny this bolero vest, completely beaded with fine beads which give it weight and a little glitter. Sleeveless, of course, and the foundation is georgette and crepe.

* * * *

And if you want to see how lovely collars and cuffs can really be look at today's illustration and see. The one above is a fluted organdie, the one in the center is too lovely for words with its heavy suede-like finish material discreetly pearled, and accompanied by pearl earrings. Whereas the one below is made of heavy gold embroidery inspired by and matching an ancient Florentine bracelet and comb that are to be worn with it.

* * * *

And now don't you think you'd better send for that leaflet on how to make collars and cuffs?

* * * *

Spring is right around the corner, and you want to think of footwear. Dare's weekly fashion letter discusses it in tomorrow's Washington Post.

Au revoir.

What Today Means to You

"PISCES."

IF March 14 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 a. m. to 10 a. m., from 1:15 p. m. to 3 p. m. and from 6:30 p. m. to 8:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. to noon and 4:15 to 6 p. m.

The astrological signs of March 14 denote an atmophere of lassitude and a desire to loaf. Under such conditions, it will be useless to attempt to do anything of importance, and routine duties should only be essayed. The evening promises many agreeable surprises—especially to lovers.

Children born on this March 14 will be quiet and unassuming, but very capable. They will think logically, act with good judgment, and always have their emotions under control. They will lack enthusiasm, be fond of travel and be adaptable. The home will be their chief delight.

If you were born on a March 14, you are independent, both in thought and action. You weigh matters carefully, without being influenced by externals or emotion, reach a conclusion and then take action in a deliberate manner. You are rather intolerant of the views of others, when they do not coincide with your own, although you claim, in season and out of season, to be a champion of free thought and free action. You are eminently practical and worldly, although there is a vein of mysticism in your life which baffles you. You are chivalrous, always play the game, and, at times, quixotic—especially when the interests of your friends are involved. If, in any undertaking, you are hampered by restrictions and limitations, failure must inevitably result. If, however, you are allowed to "gang your ain gait," and run things to suit yourself with the corresponding responsibility that a free hand implies, success is assured.

You command the respect and affection of subordinates. You direct them with decision, but without harshness. You possess exceptional natural ability. The one handicap which may hold you back in your march to a fixed goal is your attraction for the opposite sex. Once you fall in love, you will fall heavily, and unless the one on whom your affections are centered is a worthy mate and companion, your life promises to be a shadow, rather than a sunbeam.

Successful people born March 14.

2. Joseph P. Bradley, jurist.
3. Andrew Phillips, mathematician.
4. William E. Worthen, civil engineer.
5. Sir Henry Bessemer, inventor.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

PLEASE tell me if the fancy leaved caladiums with which I am always successful could be this season (after June 1) planted in the open. I have a reliable gardner who would take good care of the plants while I am abroad, if you feel I would not lose the bulbs by the venture. I have always grown these bulbs in pots. JANE T. P.

Fancy leaved caladiums do very well in the open if planted in a shaded place and kept moist.

I am about to plant gloxinias in my garden for the first time, having been given ten bulbs. Do they prefer a moist soil and a shady situation? A REAL AMATEUR.

Yes. Start them early, but do not set them outdoors until after May 15.

Please tell me in a general way something about planting hardy lilies. JULA B. L.

All hardy lilies should be planted from 6 to 8 inches deep. The Japanese varieties may even be set 12 inches below the surface. When planting, surround or envelop the bulbs with sand. Never permit manure to come into direct contact with the bulbs. It can, with safety, be placed 4 or 6 inches below the root end of the bulb. All loose-petaled bulbs should be planted on their side instead of upright. Cover with leaves or litter during the extremely cold months of the year.

Please tell me the season to plant montbretias. HELEN G. T.

Plant in early spring and set the bulbs in groups of ten. The bulbs must be set 3 to 6 inches apart each way.

Please tell me if I am right in considering the flosa flower the same as the argeratum. MRS. MARGARET T. Y.

Yes.

Please tell me if the yellow hugonis rose is suitable for hedge planting and when it should be pruned. I have one specimen bush and want more. MRS. CHARLIE T. W.

The hugonis rose makes a most beautiful hedge. This golden rose of China is very hardy in all parts of our country. It requires neither protection nor pruning, save in the occasional cutting out of the older shoots.

Can I plant a row of funkias or day lilies in a moist, shady place, or must I hunt another situation? MISS PATSY T.

Funkias delight in a moist, shady location.

I have a barberry hedge which never has seemed to grow much, though the individual plants seem to be quite healthy. Would you suggest some bonemeal in late April? MRS. HARRY S.

Yes. I would also try keeping the plants well watered and occasionally cultivate the soil to keep down the weeds.

I have a nice lot of geraniums coming along from slips I started according to your instructions some weeks ago. When may I with safety plant these in my porch and window boxes? I have 37 plants. LILIA H. T.

You may set geraniums in the open in late May.

Please tell me how to take care of a kentia palm. RUTH B. W.

Keep plant in a well-ventilated, sunny place and water it once a day. Spray the foliage at least once a week. The kentia is well suited to house use. You should be careful to keep the surface soil in the pot quite loose.

YOUR NAME
What Does It Mean?

By HARRY A. DEFARRARI, Ph. D.

THE family name "Little" is frequently disguised, intentionally or unintentionally, by retaining its various old spellings. Some of the commonest of these are "Littell," "Lytle," "Litel," "Lytell" and "Lyttle." All these forms were originally given as nicknames to little persons. Some of the persons bearing this name who are mentioned in the Hundred Rolls are William le Letle, Wiscard Litil, John le Litle and Julian Litel. In Ireland this name has often been adopted as the translated form of the original Celtic "Beag" (little), and "O Beagain" (the descendant of the littleman).

The family name "Marx" is merely a variation of "Marcus." The personal name "Marcus" (English "Mark") is of Latin origin, and may be translated "he who is like the god Mars," or "warlike."

The family name "Frean" (also spelled "Freen," "Frayne," "Frain" and "Fraine") has come down to us from two main sources. A man who moved to a town where he was not known was frequently given the nickname "Fremde" in Old English. In Middle English this name became "Fremd" and "Fren." It means "the stranger," and "the foreigner." Another source of this name is the French "frene," which means "the ash-tree." A person who had his residence near such a tree was given the name "Frene" in addition to his personal name, to distinguish him from other persons in the village who had the same personal name. Various forms of this name occur in the Hundred Rolls. Two of the persons mentioned in that important document are Robert le Freyne and Stephen le Fren. The next article of this series will include further remarks concerning this name.

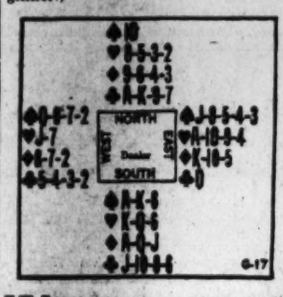
WORK ON BRIDGE

(This article is intended for the Auction and the Contract Bridge beginner.)



WITH the above hand South would be the Declarer, playing a contract of one No Trump at Auction Bridge, three No Trumps at Contract Bridge, West would lead a Spade; and as the card he would select would be the Deuce, South would know at once that West had four Spades and East five. There being no point in holding up, South would win the first Spade trick.

Noting that it would be desirable to lead Diamonds and Hearts from dummy and Clubs from closed hand, Declarer should lead a Club to trick 2 from South; and remembering that when finessing to catch a Queen, the finesse should be postponed until the second round if possible, South should lead the Jack of Clubs to trick 2 with the idea of tempting West to play the Queen if he held it, and also of getting as many entries in the North hand as possible. When West plays the Deuce North should play the King, and of course the Declarer will be delighted when he catches East's singleton Queen. It is because of just such a possibility that the finesse is postponed.

After that North would lead a Diamond to trick 3 and South would finesse. South would lead a Club to trick 4 and North would overtake with the next higher Club and lead a second Diamond for a second finesse. Then the Ace of Diamonds could be led so as to cash North's thirteenth Diamond if possible (the play of the Ten of Diamonds by East on the second round having indicated that he had the King alone), and with the King captured a third Club would be led and just covered by North, who then would cash his good Diamond, South discarding a Spade. After that North would lead a Heart toward South's King-Queen; and if East played the Ace, the Declarer of course would get a small slam (at Auction). If East held up, South would win and lead the fourth Club to enable North to lead a second Heart; and regardless of what East did, the twelve tricks for North and South would be assured.

BUREAU LISTS FOOD FOR LIMITED INCOME

Bean Sprouts Found Delicious and May Be Raised in Kitchenette.

Recognition of the fact that not all the home makers in Washington are heads of families, but that many single women living alone enjoy the benefits of a real home, the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the woman's division of the President's emergency committee for employment has taken under consideration this food and economic problem.

Experts of the bureau have studied the food needs of the woman living alone and developed a guide to aid those who are forced to live on small incomes during the present employment emergency. In this guide a list of foods is given for one week providing good nutrition returns for a limited outlay of money.

Another suggestion of utmost value to the woman living alone by the Bureau of Home Economics is that an emergency garden in even the tiniest kitchenette can produce a valuable and delicious food—bean sprouts—at the cost of a few cents. This novel suggestion has already been tried out with success in a number of Washington homes.

Food Guide for Women.

In the matter of the food guide an adult woman needs the following supplies weekly as a minimum diet. Of course, this guide may be built up according to the individual taste and pocketbook, but this is sufficient to keep any woman healthy and well nourished for the period of seven days.

Each week, according to this food guide, an adult woman needs 3½ to 7 quarts of milk, 4 to 5 pounds of bread, ½ to 1 pound of flour, 1 pound of cereal, 3 to 4 pounds of potatoes, ¼ to ½ pound of legumes, which includes peanut butter; 1½ to 2 pounds of tomatoes, 4 to 6 pounds of other vegetables and inexpensive fruits, 1 to 2 pounds of lean meat, fish and poultry; 1 to 3 eggs, ¼ pound of cheese, nuts and gelatin; ¾ pound of fats, such as lard, salt pork, bacon, margarine, butter &c.; 1 to 1¼ pounds sugars and sweets, ½ pound of coffee, ⅛ pound of tea, 1-3 pound of cocoa.

This list presupposes that the cooking will be done at home, which is naturally the best way to keep down food expenses. Otherwise similar foods would have to be bought ready prepared and at an increased cost.

A one-burner stove with portable oven will be entirely adequate for her needs, the bureau points out. With little money, the variety of foods for each meal can not be great, but to eat simply cooked meals is much better than to eat out of paper bags, a tendency into which the person living alone is likely to fall.

Women more than men, the bureau says, are inclined to eat irregularly. When they live by themselves this tendency is further exaggerated—so the first requisite is to have regular meals.

Must Plan Carefully.

Dr. Hazel K. Stiebeling, food economist of the bureau, who developed the food guide, emphasizes that if a woman eats alone she must exercise greater care and thought in meal planning. Because of the expense and difficulty in buying in small quantities, meals are likely to become monotonous and food is likely to be wasted. The best way to avoid this, she suggests, is to plan the entire week's menus before going out to shop. Storage and refrigerating facilities play an important part in keeping down expenses. This problem is comparatively easy in winter, but with the advent of warmer weather perishable foods must be kept on ice.

Milk and cereals are the important mainstays of an inexpensive diet, Dr. Stiebeling says. These two should be supplemented with tomatoes or citrus fruits; vegetables—some of which should be of the green or yellow color; a small quantity of lean meat, fish and eggs; cheese, fats and sweets. Persons following this food guide will avoid malnutrition, a danger which is always likely to accompany subnormal, industrial and agricultural conditions, she declares. As soon as more funds are available, the quantity of meats and vegetables should be increased.

How to Grow Sprouts.

A pound of beans, costing from 5 to 18 cents, will produce enough sprouts to serve four or five persons, the bureau points out. Very little extra work or space is necessary and the sprouts are a valuable source of that very important vitamin, C, which is also found in tomatoes and citrus fruits. Dried beans, peas, corn and even the smaller cereal grains can be used for this purpose, though if the latter are sprouted a much larger quantity has to be handled.

Sprouting changes legumes and grains into an entirely different type of vegetables. Some of the starch present in dried beans is used up in the sprouting process and the remainder is changed into simpler form. Bean sprouts are an old story in the Chinese dietary, but the Occidental has made little use of this source of vegetables. The bureau suggests that they have a regular place in the diet, especially where families are living on limited incomes and are not likely to get a sufficient supply of vitamin C.

Another Method of Growing.

One method for sprouting, as outlined by the bureau, is as follows: Wet some cheesecloth and sprinke it with dried beans. Roll the cloth, with the beans in it, around a stick about a foot long, and place an end of the roll in water. Occasionally the whole roll should be dampened. Another way is to place the beans in any receptacle that has holes in it for draining and which can be covered, as a strainer or granite or aluminum colander. Do not fill the receptacle, for the beans will swell to at least six times their original size. Soak the beans to be sprouted over night. The next morning place them in the container. Keep them covered in a warm place and flood them with warm water at least four to five times daily.

The beans are ready to use when the sprouts are about 1 inch long. Different varieties of beans require different lengths of time to sprout—pinto beans take about one week; mung beans, which are the sprouts found in chow mein, sprout in three or four days, and soy beans require four to six days. Only enough for immediate use should be sprouted at one time, for they are as perishable as other fresh vegetables. Sprouts may be served as any leafy vegetable or combined with meat or other vegetables; used raw or cooked in omelet or cheese dishes.

Behind the Screens

With NELSON B. BELL

ONE of the long-standing complaints against the makers of movies is that they have never done right by our public in the matter of listing the cast of characters appearing in their flickering fables. The usual offense has been that the names of the dramatis personae have been flashed on and off the screen so swiftly that no one ever has been able to read further down the list than the first three.

Mr. Thomas W. Gilmer, one of this column's most helpful adherents, now rebels against another pernicious practice that is rapidly coming into wide vogue. What Mr. Gilmer particularly resents is the recitation of a long list of names under the general heading of "The Players" without any reference to the name of the character the individual actor may be impersonating. Unless the spectator knows the entire cast from past screen acquaintance, the showing of the names is of no practical value whatsoever.

This department is wholly in sympathy with Mr. Gilmer's acerbity. Many a time I have cursed softly to myself in my rich, sonorous barytone at precisely the circumstance that has caused Mr Gilmer's gorge to rise. And, no doubt, so have you, and you, and you.

Some one ought to call a meeting!

Come tomorrow, Mr. Louis Brown, who has played a brief engagement as guest publicist at the Fox since the departure of Tom Olsen for a managerial berth in his home town of Seattle, Wash., will return to his accustomed duties in the New York home office of Fox.

With the departure of Mr. Brown the duties devolving upon the director of advertising and publicity for the local cathedral will be assumed by Edgar Waite, newly appointed to the post from the Pacific Coast and already in the Capital surveying the field of his future activities.

As another Mr. Brown would remark to his pal, Amos: Hail and farewell—or something!

And speaking of the employment situation, as so few are, it is a pleasure to record that Leonard Vanderburgh has been promoted to the rank of assistant manager of the RKO-Keith Theater. Mr. Vanderburgh entered the service of R-K-O a comparatively short time ago and by dint of assiduous application to duty has progressed through the successive posts of doorman, usher, assistant chief usherand chief usher to the place of authority at the right hand of Manager C. Harry Schreiber, where a great many to whom his courtesy has been unfailing wish him a world of luck—all good.

For the first time of which I am aware, Washingtonians have an opportunity this week to hear "The Peanut Vendor" played as it should be played, in "Stolen Heaven," in which Nancy Carroll and Phillips Holmes are appearing on the screen at the Rialto.

Composed by a Cuban, this sensationally popular musical novelty was written as a "danza"—a West Indian dance that corresponds to our own foxtrot in popularity. It is played in a peculiarly syncopated rhythm that American orchestras seem wholly unable to master, although one or two of them that I have heard have come close. Many years ago I brought a number of orchtstrated danzas north with me, thinking that they would be interesting novelties for a few Midwest dance orchestras with which I was then familiar, but no one could play them so that they sounded like anything worth mentioning.

The band in "Stolen Heaven" is native to "The Peanut Vendor" and, boy, did it make me homesick for those tropics!

Reverting momentarily to the Fox, this seems to be old-timers' week there on the screen. Lew Cody, Robert Warwick and Franklin Farnum all appear prominently in the cast of "Three Rogues"—a complete review of which, by the way, will be found elsewhere in today's issue of The Post.

A newcomer is among those present, too, in the person of David Worth, handsome young leading man opposite Fay Wray, who, I am told, experienced some difficulty in getting a screen test under his real name of Leon Wirglesworth!

There is a husky-throated brunette beauty coming to the Earle Theater on March 21 who may confidently be relied upon pack the Thirteenth street house to capacity for the week she will headline the vaudeville portion of the bill. Lita Grey Chaplin is the name.

With the cheers for Charlie's latest picture, "City Lights," still filling the air and its presentation still eagerly awaited here, added glamour will attend the personal appearance of the mother of his two small sons, regardless of the merit of her act, which, incidentally, has been of sufficient worth to pack theaters throughout the land, including the Palace, in New York, for the last two years.

Mr. George Bernard Shaw, a friend of the family, may not be along, but another Irishman, Pat Casey, will be present to accompany Mrs. Chaplin at the piano.

Joan Kenyon, who appears as Mrs. Cornell with Nancy Carroll in "Stolen Heaven," is in private life Mrs. Kenyon Nicholson, wife of the noted playwright who wrote "The Barker"—not that it matters.

Lottie Mayer's "Fountain of Youth" driving act at the Fox, with its disappearing chorus girls, is reminiscent of R. H. Burnside's old New York Hippodrome tank spectacles—and just as baffling.

That clothes changing stunt under water would come in very handy the morning we are late, meaning practically every morning.

However, it would be a little tough on the singing!

CHERRY PIE AND MILK SAFE, SAYS SCIENCE

Lobster and Ice Cream Also May Be Eaten With Impunity.

Who was it started this rumor about the perils of combining lobster and ice cream, or cherry pie and milk? We must now have another of our pet fears taken from us by science, declares Beulah V. Gillaspie, in McCall's for March, in telling how to use milk in the diet and what not to be afraid of:

"Authorities are now in perfect agreement that there are no bad effects whatsoever from taking milk and acids together. You can give Junior his orange juice and his cereal and milk together at breakfast without a qualm, and you can enjoy your own grapefruit and coffee with cream, secure in the knowledge that the fruit acid is completing for you the first step in the digestion of the milk.

"You can top off a big slice of cherry pie with a glass of milk knowing that the cherries are helping along the digestion of the milk. No more wholesome drink can be served than milk flavored with any one of the fruit juices, and nothing is more delicious.

Lobster and Ice Cream.

"You can also banish the old dread in regard to the incompatibility of lobster and ice cream. When lobster and ice cream together have caused trouble, you can be sure that either one or the other, alone, would have had the same effect; in some way, one or the other had become contaminated. There has never been the slightest proof that foods which are harmless when eaten alone, can become harmful when taken together.

"The surprising fact has lately come to light that American children are receiving, on an average, only a little more than a pint of milk a day. Yet for years authorities have been teaching that every child requires at least a quart of milk daily for health protection. Adults, too, are far behind their safety quota, which is a pint to a quart of milk a day. What is the reason?

"Certainly it is not indifference on the part of us homemakers. The real trouble, it seems to me, is that many of us think of milk only as a beverage, and overlook the fact that it is a cooking ingredient also. We know that if we were to insist upon each member of our family drinking four glasses of milk a day we'd have a small mutiny to deal with, so we follow the path of least resistance. Yet by serving a large part of their milk requirement in soups, chowders, cream sauces, omelettes, ice cream, puddings, custards and other desserts we would be able to gain our point without a struggle.

Fine Results From Milk.

"There are several forms of milk that give fine results in cooking. For those of us who have to buy milk, the various concentrated forms—dried, condensed, evaported and malted—are convenient and will often prove a genuine economy.

"All the concentrated forms of milk are subjected to a superheating process that ensures perfect pasteurization. Therefore, we can be sure that in the standard brands they are safe as well as nutritious. Indeed, the concentrated milks are safer than unpasteurized fresh milk unless it is handled with the most scrupulous care; if any one doubt this, let him remember that in the past six years 258 milkborne epidemics have been reported.

"Household budget experts agree that we should spend one-fifth of our total food budget for milk—or for milk and cheese together. They point out that milk, because of its extremely high food value, is one of the cheapest foods we can buy."

Checks totaling $13,500,503.97 have been sent to 36,900 former service men by the Veterans' Bureau since the distribution of bonus money on adjusted service certificates was put into effect two weeks ago yesterday.

Machinery of handling applications has been speeded with day and night forces working at top speed, but the increase in mail from all sections has necessitated delays in both the bureau and the Washington regional office. Maj. E. T. Hitch, regional manager, explained that his office is running 23 days behind in its work.

A total of about 25,000 applications daily is being received by the bureau and about 4,000 daily by the regional office.

Variations Possible In Making Rice Pilau

(Bureau of Home Economics.)

2 thin slices salt pork cut into bits.
¾ cup uncooked rice.
3 cups hot water.
2 medium onions cut fine.
2 cups tomato juice and pulp.
½ cup chopped celery.
4 tablespoons minced parsley.
Salt.
Pepper.
Paprika.

Fry the salt pork until slightly browned. Add the rice which has been washed and drained and stir with the salt pork until the rice is a golden brown. Add the hot water gradually, cover, and cook. Slightly brown the onion in a small quantity of fat and add with the celery to the rice mixture when the rice is becoming tender. Cook ten minutes longer. Add the remaining ingredients, place in a greased baki. dish and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees to 370 degrees Fahrenheit).

Rice pilau is often served with creamed or curried meat, or meat warmed in gravy. Numerous variations are made of this dish as the following: Add cooked, chopped meat, or grated cheese, before baking; or, omitting celery and parsley, add minced green pepper; or substitute meat stock for water.

Jellies and Pies Made From Firm Cranberries

1 quart cranberries.
2 cups hot water.
2 cups sugar.

Select sound, firm berries, discarding any that are soft or withered, wash and place in a saucepan with the water. Cover and cook for a few minutes until the berries have broken, then uncover and cook rapidly a few minutes longer, stirring all the time. Press the fruit through a fine sieve to remove seed as well as skins. To the pulp add the sugar and cook for two or three minutes, or until the jelly sheets from the spoon. Mold in small wet molds, holding about the right quantity for one meal.

If you prefer cranberry sauce, add the sugar to the cooked unstrained fruit and watch for the jelly test in the same way. Cranberry pie may be made of cranberry sauce or uncooked cranberries, with or without raisins.

Weather Retards Spring Purchases

Seasonal Acceleration of Commercial Activities Slowly Seen.

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—The weekly mercantile reviews report continued slow recovery in the trade situation.

Bradstreet's tomorrow will say: "Aside from the slight ebb and flow movements, these based very generally on the weather which has been on the whole favorable to early crop conditions while tending to hold down early spring buying, there is little to add to last week's report of a deliberate, one might easily term it so, growth in spring trade and in manufacturing industry."

Dun's tomorrow will say: "The more numerous indications of acceleration of commercial activity as spring approaches are encouraging, but do not suggest rapid and widespread expansion. Some advance now, in response to seasonal forces, is wholly natural, yet this trend is being viewed with recognition of the fact that various obstacles to complete revival still remain."

Curb Review

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—The Curb market slipped further in another quiet session today.

Utilities were under rather heavy selling pressure at times, although the day's total transactions aggregated only 414,400 shares or 18,200 less than yesterday's.

Electric Bond & Share was an active feature, selling off more than a point, but reducing its loss to a fraction as shorts covered in the last hour. American Gas & Electric, American Light & Traction and United Light "A" lost a point or more. Standard Power & Light, an infrequently traded issue, appeared at 45, off 5 points.

Among industrials declining a point or two to new minimum levels for the year were Carrier Corporation, Colts Patent Firearms, Consolidated Aircraft, Glen Alden Coal and Triple Safety Glass. Driver Harris declined 3. A few issues moved against the trend. American Potash, trading for the second time this year, was up nearly 2 points. General Baking new stock rose about as much, to record the year's best price, and Novadel Agene made a similar upturn. Aluminum Co. and Deere were firm.

Oils were inclined to ease, but losses were largely fractional. Gulf lost nearly a point. Cities Service recovered and closed steady. Mines were mostly neglected, although Newmont slipped off a point.

COTTONSEED OIL MARKET.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—Severn P. Kerr, chairman of the board of Sharon Steel Hoop Co., said the experience of his company in the current steel market indicates "very definitely that business is on the upturn." He said that while no unusually large orders are being placed, each day's business shows some improvement.

A. W. Peet has been elected chairman of the board of the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., succeeding the late Sydney M. Colgate. C. L. Frederick, general domestic sales manager, and Sydney Kirkman, president of Kirkman & Son, were elected directors.

Further improvement appeared in the insolvency record for the United States this week as reported by R. G. Dun & Co. Defaults totaled 585, against 614 last week and 560 for the corresponding week of 1930. Insolvencies with liabilities of $5,000 or more each totaled 354, against 362 for the like week last year.

Although 9.1 per cent below figures for the like month of 1930 new life insurance production last month was relatively better than in the first month of the year, when a decrease of 10.7 per cent was shown in comparison with January last year. The comparisons were shown in a statement by the Association of Life Insurance Presidents.

Net profits of the Pet Milk Co. and subsidiaries after charges for depreciation, interest and Federal taxes for 1930 amounted to $800,687 compared with $627,456 for 1929. The 1930 total is equivalent to $1.56 a common share compared with $1.18 a share for 1929.

A board of arbitration, the New York Sun reports, has fixed $1,550 per share as the price the New York Central Railroad should pay to acquire approximately 200 shares of Michigan Central common stock.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

FOOD POISONING.

MRS. N. G. writes: Will you please explain ptomaine, its cause, symptoms and after-effects. I read somewhere that it came on with vomiting and purging, and some one else said there is pain and weakness at first.

REPLY.

Physicians stopped writing about ptomaine several years ago. The term is not a good one. It is scientifically wrong. An additional reason was that it had come to be used very loosely. It was something of a catch-all. In order to promote a better understanding, as well as to be more accurate, the general term—food poisoning—was substituted for ptomaine poisoning. Then "food poisoning" was divided into several disorders. One of these is botulinism. This is caused by a gas producing bacillus growing in canned goods. A clearer understanding of this disease and its cause, and improved methods of canning, have almost wiped out botulinus poisoning. This is a poisoning of the nervous system, with double vision, great weakness and other nerve symptoms. It generally comes on a day or more after eating spoiled food. It is frequently fatal. It is not a diarrheal disease, except in rare instances.

Another form of food poisoning is the diarrheas caused by paratyphoid bacilli and allied bacteria. It generally comes on within a few hours after eating the poisoned food. Diarrhea, vomiting and cramps are the outstanding symptoms. There may be fever.

Another form of food poisoning is the fevers somewhat like typhoid, caused by members of the paratyphoid group of bacilli or other kinsmen. In this variety diarrhea is a minor symptom and vomiting is not to be expected.

Thus you see that, while the term ptomaine poisoning has disappeared, or nearly so, the various food poisonings are still much in evidence. It seems probable that botulinism due to eating canned goods may not trouble us much from now on. Not so the other forms of food poisoning. They seem to be on the increase within the last ten years. This seems to be due to our more complicated kitchen arrangements and our custom of buying our foods rather than raising them, and eating them on the premises where they are produced.

ADDISON'S DISEASE.

Daily Reader writes: What causes discoloration of the skin, the trunk of the body and the neck being especially affected? The skin is very much darkened, with light, rather small, circular blotches in it. The arms, legs and face are free from it. What will cure it?

REPLY.

The most important cause is Addison's disease. This is a disease of the adrenal glands. This disease is generally held to be incurable. Dr. Rountree is trying a method of treatment which seems to offer hope. Have your physician determine whether you have Addison's disease and, if so, advise you whether he thinks the Rountree treatment offers much for you.

Reno's Divorce Colony Boosts Air Mail Cargoes

Reno, Nev., March 13 (A.P.).—Reno's divorce business helps the air mail business. Each resident of Reno writes an average of 2.4 air mail letters a month for delivery in the East. A monthly average showed that Reno, with a population of 20,000, dispatched 48,000 air mail letters.

Homesickness in Reno's divorce colony, together with the frequent need for rushing legal documents, are given as reasons for the heavy patronage.

BILOXI, Miss., March 13.—"Friday, the thirteenth" proved to be quite an unlucky one for Outfielder Dave Harris, as Manager Walter Johnson this morning turned him over to the tender mercies of Trainer Mike Martin.

The fact that an uncharged error by the big fly chaser played a big part in the loss of yesterday's game to the Baltimore Orioles had nothing to do with the punishment Dave took this morning running himself dizzy around the park. Johnson merely decided that the Greensboro sheriff had much too much fat on his bones to say nothing of his shortness of wind.

By the time "Sir Mique" gets through with Dave, it is safe to say that he will be "in the pink."

Nats to Split Squad For 2 Games.

Two Washington teams likely will be in action a week from next Sunday as plans are just about completed whereby the second-stringers will go to Mobile to meet that city's Southern Association entry while the Nat regulars are entertaining Louisville here. If the trip is taken, P. Riley Baxter, assistant trainer and "assistant" in practically everything else here, will be in charge of the "Yannigans."

This second-string combination, by the way, is plenty good. With Hargrave behind the bat, it will have Joe Kuhel at first, Jack Hayes at second, Charley Montague at short, and Baxter Jordan at third, with Dave Harris, Harry Rice and Leo Burns or Tommy Gilligan in the outfield.

Johnson Impressed By Burns.

Speaking of Burns, it might not be out of order to state that Manager Johnson considers him a diamond in the rough and predicts a future berth with the Nationals for this youngster. Although just a youngster, Leo, one of the two proteges of Joe Cronin, has had considerable experience. He graduated into pro ranks after completing the high school course at St. Ignatius, in San Francisco, starting off in 1928 with the Idaho Falls Team in the Utah-Idaho League. This club disbanded and Burns hooked on with Pocatello in the same circuit. He did so well there that Los Angeles bought him for 1929 delivery and then farmed him out that season and in 1930 to the Bisbee Club, of the Arizona State League.

While Leo calls himself an outfielder—and he looks like a good one—he played every position but catcher and pitcher while with the Bisbee Club, ending last season with a .330 stick mark. He became a free agent last winter, and Clark Griffith immediately signed him on Cronin's recommendation.

Burns is a good ground coverer, a sure catch and stands up nicely at the plate. In Thursday's game against the Orioles he worked more than half the game and cracked out a double. He is not yet ready for the majors, but Johnson declares he is a fine prospect.

Joe Judge Frisky In Practice.

First Baseman Joe Judge was as frisky as a colt in the infield workout this morning and snagged poor pegs with one hand in midseason form. When it is remembered that this will be his sixteenth season at a rather trying position, and that at times the Nat captain has been bothered with poor underpinning, it is remarkable that he is showing practically no signs of slowing up.

Wally Dashiel, slated as one of the utility infielders, has not yet let out because of the mild Charley horse attack he suffered his first day out.

If he does not hurry up this Baxter Jordan, who is battling Cliff Bolton for the utility pinch-hitting job, may take a notion to challenge Wally and cause his unexpected return to Chattanooga.

BOYS CLUB CELTICS WIN.

Boys Club Celtics defeated Petworth Baptists last night, 35-20, on the Langley Junior High School court. The Celtics clinched the decision with a second-half rally.

THE Wallace Memorial quintet joied the select company of teams in the second round of the 145-pound division of the District of Columbia A. A. U. basket ball championship last night by eliminating the Petworth Juniors in its first test of the tournament which The Washington Post is sponsoring at Tech High School.

The expulsion of Sherman from the game, via the personal foul route, near the end of the fray spelled the doom of the Pets, and Wallace went on to clinch the verdict.

The score at the turn stood 15 to 13 in favor of the eventual winners, and hardly more than a basket or two ever separated the clubs until Sherman was ruled out of the game.

Aloysians' Rally Beats Strayer Girls.

In the first contest in the girls section of the tournament, the Aloysians defeated the Strayer's Business College Sextet by the score 35 to 27 in a game that almost stole the show from the boys.

It was a thrilling contest from start to finish, the score standing 11 to 8 in favor of the Aloysians at the end of the first quarter; 17 to 17 at the half; and 26 to 25 favor Strayer's at the end of the third quarter.

Boasting of a crack basket marksmen on each team, the two outfits hung together all during the game, and only the Aloysians, splendid spurt, near the end gave them victory. High scoring honors finally went to Miss Meyer, of the losers, who scored 24 points.

Perhaps the finest exhibition was given by Miss Harrington, of the winning team, whose play in the center of the court made possible the fact that towards the end the Aloysians were in almost constant possession of the ball. Her passing and ability to stick close to the ball were exceptional.

Olmsted's Last-Half Rally Nets Victory.

Olmsted Grill cracked out a worthy 27-to-15 victory over the Westerners in the feature 130-pound division game of the night.

The Grillmen were given a merry chase in the first half, at which time they led, but only by the margin of 14 to 10. A determined second-half drive separated the two teams.

Olmsted showed a quartet of clever shooters in Wills, Reichardt, Waters and English. All have made names for themselves in schoolboy uniforms.

Calvary Juniors Bow To Northwesterns.

The Northwesterns swamped the Calvary Juniors to the tune of 32 to 8 in the other game played in the 130-pound division. Showing a brand of passing and shooting which found little opposition from the Churchmen, the orthwesterns forged to an early and never-headed advantage.

With Smyrnax and Cossette finding the center of the rim to good effect, Northwestern had little difficulty in piling up a point advantage while Williams and Conner were holding down the Calvary forwards with almost air-tight play.

The night's activities were opened by the Stuart A. C.'s victory over St. Martin's, 30-16, in the 100-pound class.

The two clubs, looking very diminutive in the big Tech Gym, produced a brand of passing and shooting that might have done credit to a larger and older brace of clubs.

The Great Art Reports, Milwaukee Now Safe

Hot Springs, Ark., March 13 (A.P.).—Art Shires (The Great) showed up here today and dispelled the fear of Milwaukee club officials that he was lost. A snowstorm delayed his departure from Chicago until yesterday, he said.

Soon after his arrival, despite the lack of sleep, Art donned a Milwaukee uniform for the first time and joined the batting practice. The erstwhile major leaguer will play in an exhibition game here tomorrow between Milwaukee and Minneapolis, both of the American Association.

Shires was due early in the week and when the days passed without word from him, President Louis Nahin, of the Brewers, grew worried.

Proof Against Iowa U. Admitted to Probers

Des Moines, Iowa, March 13 (A.P.).—The University of Iowa's faculty representative at the Western Conference meeting in 1929 today told the legislative commitee investigating the school's administration that he considered the conference "had the goods on us" when Iowa was suspended.

Prof. Louis Pelzer, the faculty representative, read a prepared statement to the committee of legislators detailing the story of the Big Ten meeting held May 25, 1929, and was questioned regarding his defense of the charges against Iowa presented to the conference faculty group.

Pelzer related that a committee of Big Ten athletic directors reported to the morning session of the faculty group that three institutions had violated conference rules. He indicated that Iowa's infractions were deemed more serious because of the belief at the meeting that schol officials knew of them. He refused to name the other two schools mentioned as violators.

Stars in K. of C. Games Assault Marks Tonight

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—The Eastern indoor track season comes to a blazing finale tomorrow night in the historic Knights of Columbus games, with a large field of national and intercollegiate champions ready for a final assault on the indoor records.

Toeing the mark in the various events in Madison Square Garden will be such outstanding performers as Leo Lermond, national two-mile indoor champion; Ray Conger, Illinois A. C., flier who won the 1,000-yard crown a few weeks ago; Fred Sturdy, the slim pole vaulter from the Los Angeles A. C.; Bernie McCafferty, Holy Cross middle distance star; George Spitz, world record holder in the high jump indoors; Ira Sinser, national sprint champion, and Harold Osborn, the Virginia schoolmaster and perennial threat in the high jump.

Georgetown will be represented tonight in the Knights of Columbus meet in New York by Al Kelly, sprinter, and a two-mile relay team composed of Chuck Carlin, Jack Mara, Capt. Vic Burke and Jim Kelly, who will run in the order named. Kelly, who won the college 70-yard dash title last Saturday, will meet a strong field in a special series at 50 and 60 yards.

St. Louis, March 13 (A.P.).—Herman Bader, 67, pioneer professional baseball player and veteran Republican politician, died here today of heart disease.

Levey Shines For Browns In Victory

Bush Selects Simons as Clear-Up Batter for Chisox.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 13 (U.P.).—Jim Levey's speed on the bases featured the 10-0 victory of the St. Louis Browns over the Coast Guard nine of Fort Lauderdale today.

Levey, formerly of the Quantico Marines, was up six times, became a base runner each time, getting three hits, a walk and reaching first once on an error and another time on a force-out. Twice he beat out slow rollers through the infield, giving Manager Killefer cause to smile over the fact his new shortstop behaves as well at the bat as he does in the field.

Red Sox Regulars Swamp Rookies.

Pensacola, March 13 (A.P.).—The Boston Red Sox regulars pounded two rookie pitchers hard here today for a 10-to-3 victory over the Yannigans. Ed Morris and "Bull" Durham hurled for the regulars and Jack Russell and Sumner Collingwood were the scrubs' box men. Hal Rhyne and Russ Scarritt each banged out four hits against the Russell-Collingwood combination.

Rookie Simons Lands Chisox Berth.

San Antonio, Tex., March 13 (A.P.).—Mel Simons, hustling rookie from Louisville, will be clean-up man for the White Sox when they engage in their first spring exhibition game with the New York Giants tomorrow.

Manager Donie Bush decided to use Simons in the clean-up position, using Carl Reynolds before him and Smead Jolley fifth in the batting order.

Tigers Beaten, 5-2, By Coast Club.

San Francisco, Calif., March 13 (A.P.).—The San Francisco Seals celebrated formal opening of their new $1,250,000 ball park here today by defeating Detroit's Tigers, 5-2, before a crowd of 15,000.

Paso Robles, Calif., March 13 (A.P.).—The Pittsburgh Pirates' new arrivals, Paul Waner and Adam Comorosky, outfielders, joined practice today showing no ill effects from afflictions which delayed them in coming to camp.

As a precautionary measure an aluminum cuff will be worn by Waner over his bandaged ankle until the sore spot where his leg was infected has healed. The club doctor, after examining Comorosky, said the mild skin eruption he suffered is disappearing.

Mattingly Helps Win for Robins.

Clearwater, Fla., March 13 (A.P.).—With Earl Mattingly and Bill Greene, a pair of rookies up from Macon, Ga., dividing the hurling duties, the Brooklyn Dodgers' second string eked out a 10-to-9 decision over the House of David today.

Winter Haven, Fla., March 13 (A.P.).—Lewis C. Ruch, president of the Phillies, arrived in camp today and after a conference with Manager Shotton expressed the belief the three Philly holdouts, "Chuck" Klein, Phil Collins and John Sherlock, would sign their contracts.

"I have sent for Klein and expect him to reach here in a day or two," Ruch said. "We feel we have offered him a contract that is more than fair.

"As for Collins and Sherlock, we have offered them both substantial increases."

Brown lays claim to being the speediest artist in theworld, having painted as many as 80 pictures in a single day. More remarkable is the fact that he does not stick to a limited number of scenes but paints around 65 varieties, and despite the speed with which his work is turned out, he does something most artists are unable to do. He sells his paintings!

NET TOURNEY FOCUSED ON BOROTRA

Frenchman Favorite as U. S. Indoor Play Opens Today.

NEW YORK, March 13 (A.P.).—With all except a few of the top ranking American stars mysteriously missing, the American indoor tennis championships open tomorrow in the Seventh Regiment Armory. Jean Borotra, French Davis Cup veteran, holds most of the spotlight.

Several explanations have been offered as to why John Hope Doeg, national outdoors champion; George Lott, jr., John Van Ryn and others choose to sulk in their tents while the French invade the American field. The fact remains that only Frank Shields, Berkeley Bell and Cliff Sutter, of the American top flight, have entered the tourney.

Shields and Borotra are conceded the best chance to win through to the finals, having been placed in different brackets. Borotra's chief opponents in the upper bracket are Sutter and Julius Seligson; former junior champion, while Shields must overcome Christian Boussus, France's young star; Pierre Landry, also of France, and Bell, if he hopes to play Borotra for the title a week from Saturday.

Play in the tournament opens tomorrow morning, skips Sunday and then continues all next week. Most of the 64 entries are from the East.

Entries are still being received for the doubles, which will be played in conjunction with the singles during the week.

Nats' Line-Up Forecast by Woman

MRS. NORMA JUDD, of 2121 New York avenue, yesterday joined the great list of fans who have sent in their ideas to The Post's baseball editor on the Nats' 1931 prospects and the probable make-up of the team. She fakes her place with those who are under consideration for the six box seats The Post is offering for the opening game April 14 between the Nats and the world-champion Athletics.

Mrs. Judd states in forthright language that the following batting order will prevail when the Nats break camp: Sam Rice, right field; Myer, second base; Manush, left field; Cronin, shortstop; Judge, first base; West, center field; Bluege, third base, followed by catcher and pitcher.

Giving her reasons why she thinks Washington will win the pennant, Mrs. Judd argues that Washington can attribute its loss of the pennant last year to the lack of good reserves. This year, Mrs. Judd states, the Nats have reserve material galore. Harry Rice fills the long-needed want of a good substitute garden patrolman who can hit. Kuhel is a great understudy for Judge, while Bolton seems to be a pinch hitter of the first water.

Harry Rice Fills Long Need

But it is the improvement of the pitching staff, Mrs. Judd believes, which will give Washington a pennant. Hadley ("who has more stuff than any pitcher in either league"), Marberry, Liska, Jones nad Crowder ought to be able to take regular turns on the hill. And then these performers will be ably backed up by Brown, Burke and Fischer.

Has Mrs. Judd left anything unsaid? Let's hear from some more of you thousands of fans in Washington. Six box seats are not to be sniffed at any time during the season, but for that opening game they take on the aspect of dollars selling for dimes.

Remember: Only one side of the paper, and keep it within 250 words, and give your reasons for your choices.

Women Stars Seek Track Titles Tonight

Newark, N. J., March 13 (A.P.).—With Stella Walsh, of Cleveland, and Mary Carew, of Medford, Mass., as the leading attractions, the national indoor track and field championships for women will be held here tomorrow night in the 113th Regiment Armory.

Miss Walsh, who holds numerous world's records, will defend her title in the 220-yard dash, but will not attempt the 40-yard sprint, in which her rival, Miss Carew, took her measure last year. Miss Carew will attempt both dashes, however, defending her 40-yard title and attempting to capture Miss Walsh's 220-yard crown.

Boston Heavy Is Victim of Left Jabs

ROUND THREE—Schaaf switched from a waiting role and tried to take the offensive, but he ran straight into Loughran's sharp left. Schaaf could not seem to get his gloves on the fleet Philadelphian, and he was blinking constantly under the stream of lefts that bounded from his features. Schaaf dug two left hooks into Loughran's side, but Tommy was working on his face with that smart left hand, all ready to sit down again in his corner when the gong sounded.

ROUND FIVE—Schaaf took another gross of jabs on his tender nose before he sank a harsh left into Loughran's body. Tommy punched back fiercely and nailed Schaaf twice with crackling right crosses to the head. Ernie tore in furiously with both hands pumping, but Loughran made him miss, jabbed him off balance, tied him up perfectly in the clinches, and was ready to sit down again in his own corner, to the huge delight of the crowd, as the bell rang out.

ROUND SIX — Cooly Loughran stepped around the ring, stabbing the londe plodder with his left, hooking to the head, keeping the big sailor constantly off balance. It was a remarkable exhibition of skill and craft and Schaaf seemed bewildered in his efforts to land a solid wallop. Schaaf tried to get in close and rough it out, but Loughran tied him up nicely. It was all very one-sided.

ROUND SEVEN — Schaaf rushed from his corner, a new maneuver, but all it got him was a half dozen jabs on the sore nose. Loughran flipped two jabs into Ernie's puzzled head, hooked twice with his left, crossed a beautiful right to the chin, and then calmly tied Schaaf into a sailor's knot. Schaaf whipped one desperate right to Loughran's ribs, but Tommy crossed a right back into Ernie's teeth. Loughran was in complete command of the situation when the gong clanked.

ROUND EIGHT — Schaaf poked Tommy with two lefts to the face,

FIGHT CHIEFS TO PAY TUT, PETROLLE

NEW YORK, March 13 (A.P.).—Whatever case the New York State Athletic Commission was able to muster against Billy Petrolle and King Tut, a pair of lightweights under investigation on suspicion of faking a recent fight in Madison Square Garden, was closed today with no other announcement than that the boys would be paid their wages for the match.

Their pay was withheld at the commission and an investigation launched shortly after Petrolle scored a four-round knockout over Tut. Reports of a betting coup, Tut's 34-second knockout of Petrolle in a previous match; rumors beforehand that the match was "in the bag" and Tut's

By HENRY M'LEMORE.

NEW YORK, March 13 (U.P.).—Don't be surprised if you pick up your favorite paper one of these mornings and learn that Joie Ray plans to run for President just as soon as he returns from his non-stop glider flight around the world and writes the last chapter of his treatise on Egyptian embalming.

And don't be surprised if Joie goes ahead and carries out his plans, for there is no stopping this chesty little fellow who started life as a taxicab driver and went on to become one of America's most famous middle-distance runners, marathon gallopers, snowshoers and man-about-everything.

This little piece on Joie was inspired by an obscure item in a Newark (N. J.) paper today saying Joie had entered a 25-mile international roller skate marathon at Dreamland Rink there tomorrow night. Along with a dozen or

B'AR HUNTER, BAROMETER BRADLEY'S DERBY HOPES

Colonel Seeks 3d Win in Classic

B'ar Hunter Is Half Brother to Blue Larkspur.

By THOMAS H. NOONE
(United Press Racing Editor).

NEW YORK, March 13 (U.P.).—The Kentucky Derby picture would be hardly complete without the colors of Col. Edward Riley Bradley. The green and white silks of the master of Idle Hour Farm have been prominent in this classic for a decade, and this year he has named B'ar Hunter and Barometer to compete for the coveted prize by which owners and breeders of thoroughbred horses set such great store.

These colts are fairly even matched, and although neither performed brilliantly as a juvenile, the Kentucky sportsman hopes to win his third derby with one of them.

His particular favorite may be said to be B'ar Hunter, a bay son of Black Servant and Bit of White which is a product of the Bradley breeding farm. He is a half-brother to Blue Larkspur, third dargest American money winner of all time, and resembles the latter in many respects. Barometer, by Traumer out of Hathor, is also a sturdy fellow, and the fact that he has been nominated for this stake is a strong recommendation.

Bradley Disappointed By Blue Larkspur.

Col. Bradley's turf interests are large and varied, but his main hopes are centered in winning the Kentucky Derby. The fact that Blue Larkspur failed to win this stake in 1929 inflicted a wound that was not healed by his later rise to fame, with its attendant financial returns.

Whether or not B'ar Hunter or Barometer vindicate the defeat of the Idle Hour star two years ago, followers of the turf may be sure that while there is breath in his body Edward Riley Bradley will always be pointing horses for the Kentucky Derby to carry on the deeds of Behave Yourself and Bubbling Over, which bore his colors to victory in 1921 and 1926, respectively.

The Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime—By H. T. Webster

Boots and Saddles

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office)

—St. John's Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

MUD, Justa Farm's 5-year-old son of Madrigalian, which was a beaten favorite at Miami in his last start, but previously had won impressively, should win the St. George claiming handicap, which features the St. Johns card today. This is a short sprint of 5½ furlongs.

TANTALIZING, which beat Guilder and others Wednesday, will be a sharp contender. GRACIOUS GIFT, a spectacular winner recently over Guilded Arch, seems best of the others.

FIRST RACE—SUNCHEN should repeat if the wise money is down. He went a mile in his last, but led all the way. POINCANA may be the contender and has a chance for first money. SULLIVAN TRAIL has been running close up.

SECOND RACE—DARK ANGEL, at top form, is well placed. STRETCHER is the chief opposition. JACK CRAIN should hold the others safe.

THIRD RACE—GANLEE is selected to win. HOWEE, just arrived from Havana, should be the contender. RIVERLEE is better than he has shown.

FIFTH RACE—The fifth should go to ESTIN, about the most reliable of the old-timers around the winter tracks. BLUCHDENEEN won last time out and is fast. ZEETA should be third.

SIXTH RACE—C. R. Fleischman's ICARUS should repeat. He won his last out, a few days ago, from Enthusiastic. MAGIC CARPET may run a good race. On form RUNDALE has a chance.

SEVENTH RACE—CRASH should win right back. He beat Gold Star a week ago. Madeley will ride. SPANFLOW will be a keen contender, and JACK BERRY should wake up and get third money.

2 BOWLING FEATURES TONIGHT

"Dub" Sweepstakes and Suburban Event on Schedule.

DUCKPIN fans of this section are excited over a pair of attractive sweepstakes which swing into action tonight, the second annual Bill Wood Dub stakes to be run off on the Lucky Strike alleys, and the first Maryland-Virginia Suburban Sweepstakes listed to make its debut at Mount Rainier.

The promotors of each affair have laid down stringent entrance requirements. To be eligible to compete in the Bill Wood event one must possess a season's average of less than 106, although it is not absolutely necessary to be a league bowler. Women rollers also are eligible. One must be a member of some team in the Maryland-Virginia Suburban League to enter the suburban sweepstakes.

Entrance fees will be $5 for the dubs and $10 for the suburbanites, plus cost of games. Each event is of the standard three five-game-block variety, with total pins to count.

Entry List of 100 At Lucky Strike.

The management of the Lucky Strike alleys, which is conducting the Bill Wood stakes, estimates a total entry list of more than 100, while the Maryland-Virginia Suburban Duckpin Association, sponsor of the other affair, is counting on approximately 80 participants in its sweepstakes. Included in those who have already submitted their entries in the latter stakes, are Perce Wolfe, Henry Hiser, Oscar Hiser, Astor H. Clarke, and other suburban satellites.

The committee which is in charge of the suburban stakes, comprises George Clark, Rosslyn; Henry Hiser, Bethesda; Raymond Gordon, Mount Rainier; and C. T. Johnson, Boulevard.

Mrs. Jones Wins Title In Belleair Golf Final

Belleair, Fla., March 13 (A.P.).—Mrs. Melvin Jones, Chicago, won the Belleair women's golf championship, defeating Mrs. Helen B. Stetson, Philadelphia, 3 and 2. The Chicago woman's victory culminated a week of remarkable golf, during which she won the qualifying medal and three subsequent matches by the one-sided margins of 7 and 5.

Defeat of Mrs. Stetson marked the first time in three years the former national champion has lost in the Belleair tournament. She won the title in 1929 and repeated last year.

Mrs. Jones beat Mrs. Stetson at her own game. Longer from the tees through the fairway, Mrs. Jones was not expected to match the fine short game of the Philadelphian, but she won with iron shots.

STOCKS IRREGULAR IN SMALL TURNOVER

Few Shares Hold Ground as General Trend Sends Prices Lower.

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—Developments of interest to the share market were lacking today, and trading followed the pattern laid down earlier in the week—a slow, irregular decline in a small turnover. Sales approximated only 2,400,000 shares.

At is worst the market was off 1 to 6 points; at its best a few stocks sold above yesterday's close, and at the close small, moderate losses predominated. Bonds were mixed, although favoring the domestic. However, issues of this and foreign governments improved. Grains and cotton sagged, but bar silver nearly recovered what it had lost yesterday.

The action of U. S. Steel, General Electric, Radio, General Motors and some other equally prominent shares, none of which responded to pressure, sent the shorts gunning for less resistant issues, particularly the volatile favorites. Westinghouse, American Water Works, Allied Chemical, Case, Bethlehem Steel, Johns-Manville, Eastman Kodak and Western Union at one time were 3 to 6 points lower, but the absence of important liquidation in the rails plus the refusal of the market to show any volume stimulated enough late covering to cut the extreme decline in half.

U. S. Steel Yields.

Allied Chemical, which had been off 5¾ to the lowest price in three years, was down only a fraction net at the finish. Eastman's 6½-point drop was reduced. Westinghouse got back two-thirds of its 3-point recession and Water Works' break of 4 dwindled to a little more than 1.

United States Steel yielded to 142½, a low for the movement, but closed ⅝ higher. American Can finished unchanged and American Telephone, ex-dividend, was half a point off. New York Central managed a rise of a point net, but Atchison, Baltimore & Ohio, the Frisco stocks and Wabash A preferred were heavy. Illinois Central advanced 3. Texas Corporation's report, showing $1.53 a share for last year, about half the dividend requirement, bore out earlier estimates. The stock sagged a point and then recovered. Other oils were steadier than recently.

Dun's was able to report, for the second consecutive week, a preponderance of gains in its weekly commodity price tabulation. Increasing strength of hides was largely responsible for this week's improvement, which, as the review pointed out, may be only temporary. As for business in general, the survey said "the more numerous indications of acceleration of commercial activity as spring approaches are encouraging, but do not suggest rapid and widespread expansion."

Sentiment of Bradstreet's.

The sentiment of Bradstreet's was somewhat similar, "A deliberate, one might term it slow, growth in spring trade and in manufacturing industry," Dun's record of commercial failures showed the smallest total in some time.

Favorable weather for winter wheat, large South American exports and lower Winnipeg quotations combined to depress the later deliveries in that grain about a cent. Corn sagged sympathetically, but its net losses were fractional. Cotton reacted 6 to 9 points, net.

Foreign exchanges were mostly lower, although narrowly so. Sterling cables sagged ½ cent and the peseta dipped several points, reflecting political uncertainties in Spain.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, March 13 (A.P.).—Buying support was suddenly withdrawn late today, and wheat underwent an abrupt tumble, dragging other grains along. An influx of selling orders from the East revealed that wheat had no adequate prop, and had apparently been overpurchased. World shipments of wheat this week promised to total big, and favorable weather prevailed throughout winter and spring wheat areas of the United States and Canada.

Wheat closed irregular, 1¼ cents lower to ¼ advance, corn 1½ to 1 down, oats ⅛ to ⅝ off, and provisions 5 to 22 cents up.

Downturns in Chicago grain quotations were preceded by an early sharp decline at Liverpool, but during most of the day the Chicago market kept an unusually even keel. Resting orders to buy were effective in upholding values here almost until the close. However, the fact did not escape notice that Australian wheat exports for the week totaled 3,304,000 bushels, compared with 1,024,000 the week previous and 1,480,000 a year ago, and that Argentine shipments were larger than expected.

Pilins-up of wheat supplies was emphasized by statements showing that the addition of this week's Australian exports to those from Argentina and Russia, made a total of 10,251,000 bushels, and rendered the outlook more favorable as disposal of North America's huge surplus. It was also announced that new elevator storage space in Chicago would be provided to accommodate 1,500,000 bushels of the first rush of the 1931 domestic crop about July 1. Weakness in European markets and at Winnipeg tended further to check buyers here, and so did evidence that North American export business was of small proportions, although advices said European stocks were light.

Strong factors in the corn supply situation had little influence beyond holding prices steady up to the last hour, when the market cracked. Slowness of shipping demand here for corn deterred buyers. Oats followed corn, notwithstanding continued dearth of receipts.

Provisions went up with hogs.

BOND MART FEELS UNCERTAIN OUTLOOK

Railroad Issues Reflecting Threats of More Cuts in Dividends.

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—The bond market followed stocks downward today and for the same reasons in many instances.

Railroad issues reflected the uncertain outlook for earnings and dividends for many of the carriers. Obligations with stock purchase or conversion options followed the corresponding stocks to lower levels. Foreign bonds, especially some of them which strengthened earlier in the week, were affected by the reaction in the other groups.

Bonds of the Van Sweringen railroads and companies played an important part in the decline of the rail obligations. Alleghany Corporation 5s of 1944 and of 1949, Erie General Lien 4s, Missouri Pacific General 4s, New York, Chicago & St. Louis series C 4½s, Pere Marquette series B 4s, and Wabash 3½s of 1941 dropped one point or more. A few other Van Sweringen obligations, however, were higher and the decline in rail liens was far from being confined to this group.

In the convertible group Baltimore & Ohio 4½s of 1960, General Theaters Equipment 6s, Lautaro Nitrate 6s, Loews 6s of 1941, Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron 6s of 1949, which reached a new 1931 low at 70¼, and Texas Corporation 5s were active at lower levels. Warner Brothers Pictures 6s recovered further and closed at 57¼, a new recent high.

Bonds of the United States Government crept upward in trading concentrated in three or four issues of the group. Foreign issues were irregularly lower but the German 5½s made further gains.

A syndicate headed by the Chase Securities Corporation is offering $15,000,000 of tax anticipation notes of Detroit due on August 17 to yield 2.40 per cent.

Bonds offerings this week aggregated $262,573,000 compared with $157,690,000 last week and $184,699,000 a year ago.

SATURDAY MORNING — The Washington Post. — MARCH 14, 1931

U. S. AGREES TO AID IN UTILITIES PUZZLE

Ownership Question of Gas Company Goes Step Nearer Solution.

The Department of Justice yesterday afternoon agreed to aid the Public Utilities Commission in solving the puzzle of who owns the Washington Gas Light Co. and immediately took steps to conduct its inquiry in Boston, Chicago and New York.

Corporation Counsel William W. Bride conferred with agents assigned to the case and explained what data is sought to reveal whether or not actual control of the local gas companies has passed from New York to Chicago interests.

The aid of the commission was asked for three reasons: the commission's lack of funds, its insufficient personnel, and its absence of authority to conduct such an extensive inquiry.

Exact Changes Traced.

William A. Roberts, special assistant corporation counsel, meanwhile was in Boston yesterday seeking to trace the exact changes that accompanied the amendment of the Seaboard Investment Trust's common law trust charter changing the name of the owner of the Washington Gas Light Co. and other utilities to the Washington and Suburban Companies and authorizing the issuance of $6,500,000 in bonds.

People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech yesterday pledged his assistance to Mr. Bride in the inquiry and turned over to him certain information provided by Walter Dunn, of 2402 Thirty-seventh street northwest, an engineer formerly employed by the Washington Gas Light Co.

Mr. Dunn, who sued the local gas company and the Seaboard Investment Trust for commission he alleged was due him for acquiring the Charles Town, W. Va., gas company, declared that he was instructed to buy controling interest in the organization and subsequently transfer it to the Seaboard Investment Trust. The Charles Town plant, he said, was reported to be merely a link in a chain of gas companies that the trust was buying in Harrisonburg, Richmond, Fredericksburg and Farmvile, Va., and Pocoma City, Md.

Ownership Is Denied.

The Cambridge, Md., gas company, according to Mr. Keech, has recently been acquired by the Central Public Service Corporation, which has assumed the operation, while denying the ownership, of the local gas concerns.

Department of Justice agents were reported to be interested yesterday in the departure of G. Bowie Chipman, Washington broker with the firm of Harriman & Co., for Italy, coincident with the announcement of the shift in management to Chicago. He will not return to the United States until June.

Mr. Chipman brought suit for $78,000 commission for aiding in the purchase of the local gas stock shortly after it was sold and alleged at the time that the purchase was made for Albert E. Pierce, of Chicago, or the Central Public Service Corporation. He declared that the Seaboard Investment Trust was merely a "straw man" in the deal.

Suit Was Dismissed.

This suit was dismissed later, and it is reported a settlement was made out of court.

It was explained yesterday that, though the LaFollette antimerger law was enacted in 1913 there have been no convictions under it yet and only one suit, which was lost against the Seaboard Investment Co. when the court held that the defendant was not a corporation.

Should the Washington and suburban companies be found to be similarly constituted and not owned by the Central Public Service Corporation a similar situation will exist. However, if the owners of the local gas companies are found to be a foreign corporation or holding company, the Public Utilities Commission can sue to have the stock transfered from the corporation's hands to owners that would come within the antimerger act.

Physician Is Held In Girl's Death

Coroner Orders Inquest Into Circumstances of Thelma Cain's Demise.

Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt has ordered an inquest into the death of Miss Thelma Cain, 20 years old, of Chapin street near Fourteenth street northwest, who died in Garfield Hospital Thursday night under circumstances that prompted Coroner Nevitt to order an inquest for 10 o'clock this morning.

An autopsy was performed on the body yesterday by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, and the results were such, Coroner Nevitt said, "that an inquest is necessary."

Dr. David L. Russell, 36 years old, of Harvard street near Fourteenth street northwest, and Herman Norman, 25 years old, a druggist, of Oak street near Fourteenth street northwest, were taken into custody and booked at headquarters as "held for coroner" in connection with the case.

Jury Finds Slayer Of Man Is Insane

Former St. Elizabeths Patient Recommitted; Indictment Held.

Hurst G. Neal, Negro, formerly a patient in St. Elizabeths Hospital for the Insane, who was discharged from that institution several months ago, was ordered recommitted to the hospital yesterday when a jury sitting in Justice Oscar R. Luhring's District Supreme Court, found that he was of unsound mind.

Neal was brought into the court on an indictment charging him with first degree murder. He beat to death a Negro named James Stewart in the basement of an apartment house on Massachusetts avenue near Second street northeast, in January, because, he told the court, he suspected the man had stolen a suit of "green clothes" from him.

Attorney James F. Reilly, for Neal, asked for a lunacy hearing and the indictment was held in abeyance. Assistant United States Attorney James F. Hughes, for the Government, interposed no objections to the inquisition.

$5,000 Suit Filed in Crash.

A suit for $5,000 was filed by William E. Jones, of 2101 Connecticut avenue northwest, against E. Alexander Powell, of the Hotel Washington, yesterday. In his suit Jones declared he was injured in an accident at Twentieth and M streets northwest January 12, when he was struck by an automobile driven by an agent of Powell.

SURVEY OF TEACHER ACTIVITY COMPLETE

Details of Extra Curricular Work Will Be Analyzed in Near Future.

The survey of school teachers to determine how much time they are giving to extracurricula activities has been completed, and the results are expected to be weeded out in a short time, Stephen E. Kramer, assistant school superintendent, announced yesterday.

Mr. Kramer said that a vast amount of material has been gathered. Although he can not conjecture what the survey will show, Mr. Kramer believes that the results will be surprising.

"Some teachers," he said, "are giving too much time to these extra activities, some too little and some none at all. We hope to arrange a more equitable distribution of these extra duties."

Mr. Kramer added that the survey may result in the elimination of some of the extracurricula activities. He believes that some of them are not necessary.

The teachers give their time without compensation. The activities include dramatics, club work and publications. Many other activities not generally known are expected to be revealed in the survey.

Manor Park Group Fights U. S. Suit

Condemnation Proceedings for Widening of Blair Road Contested.

Protests against condemnation suits instituted by the District Commissioners incident to the widening and straightening of Blair road and the opening of several adjacent streets were voiced yesterday by a delegation from Manor Park at a meeting of the city heads.

While the Manor Park Citizens Association had some time ago gone on record as favoring the developments, Ernest H. Pullman, one of the spokesman, explained that the business depression made the residents fear any further assesaments.

Objection against the opening of Kansas avenue and Quackenbos street, which end at the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks, were particularly strong. The protests were taken under advisement.

Dry Law Charges Bring 45-Day Term

Enea Croce Is Sentenced After Agent Testifies He Made Four Purchases.

Enea Croce, 41 years old, of I street, near Thirteenth street northwest, entered pleas of guilty to charges of violation of prohibition laws in Police Court yesterday and was given four sentences of 45 days each, to run concurrently.

Croce, arrested March 5, entered pleas of guilty to a nuisance charge, two sales charges, and second charge of possession. He was arrested after J. V. Rodgers, described as a special agent, had purchased four pints of liquor, two on March 4, and two the following day. The latter purchases were made, police claimed, with four marked dollar bills.

Charges against Josephine DiBiassi, 44 years old, arrested in the raid with Croce, were nolle prossed when he entered his pleas.

Court Dismisses Deadlocked Jury

Justice O. R. Luhring Calls Rum Case Mistrial in 12-Hour Disagreement.

When a jury trying Roland Davis and Arthur Ferguson on liquor charges failed to agree upon a verdict after deliberating for twelve hours, Justice Oscar R. Luhring yesterday directed that the jury be dismissed and a mistrial be entered in the case.

The jury was given the case Thursday afternoon. At 7 o'clock the members were taken to dinner and at 10 o'clock were ordered locked up all night in the Metropolitan Hotel. When the jury resumed deliberations yesterday morning and reported an inability to agree, the justice acted.

Attorneys James A. O'Shea and John H. Burnett defended the two, while Assistant United States Attorney James F. Hughes prosecuted. The men were arrested in a raid at Twenty-first street, near S street, in 1929.

PANHELLENIC GROUP WILL GIVE LUNCHEON

Annual Scholarship Feast to Be Tendered 27 Girls of G. W. U. Today.

Twenty-seven women students of George Washington University, selected for their high scholarship, will attend the annual scholarship luncheon of the Panhellenic Association of the university this afternoon at 1 o'clock at the Hay-Adams House. The guests will include the freshman and senior having the highest average in each sorority, and the nonsorority girl from each class who has the highest average in her class.

This year the freshman class will be represented by two girls, both of whom have received A in all of their studies. They are Helen Rose Arons and Vivian May Segar. The sophomore class will be represented by Annabelle Day; the junior class by Jean McGregor and the senior class by Genevieve Wimsatt. The sorority invitees are: Chi Omega, Harriett Rissler and Nancy Booth; Phi Mu, Louise Hickman and Mary Catherine Holsopple; Sigma Kappa, Roberta Wright and Clara Critchfield; Delta Zeta, Virginia Gummel and Helen Clarke; Pi Beta Phi, Maude Hudson and Amber Youngblood; Alpha Delta Pi, Mary Priest and Leah MacArthur; Zeta Tau Alpha, Olivia Watkins and Zersie Frazer; Phi Delta, Grace Bauer and Mary Warrington; Kappa Kappa Gamma, Jean Fugitt and Polly Linville; Kappa Delta, Margaret Douthitt and Gwendolyn Folsom; Alpha Delta Theta, Judith Wood and Jessie Harden.

A feature of the luncheon program will be the awarding of the Panhellenic scholarship cup to the sorority which has the highest scholastic average. The presentation will be made by Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., of the board of trustees of the university.

Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, wife of the president of the university, and Miss Elizabeth Cullen, president of Columbian Women, will be guests at the luncheon. Mary Hudson will act as toastmistress.

Excavation on New Court Edifice Set

Supreme Bench Building Location to See Work Begin Monday.

Excavation work for the United States Supreme Court Building, to be located directly north of the Library of Congress on a plot bounded by East Capitol street, Maryland avenue, First and Second streets northeast, will begin Monday.

The first steam shovel of dirt will be lifted at 7:30 o'clock that morning, according to G. B. Mullin & Co., of Washington, whose bid of $82,000 won it the contract for excavation and the laying of foundations. Plans had been made tentatively for breaking ground yesterday.

In order that no delay will be experienced in construction, plans for the superstructure of the building will be ready by June 1, according to David Lynn, Architect of the Capitol, who is in charge of erection of the new edifice.

Nevitt's Daughter Loses Court Fight

Judge Schuldt Finds Driver Guilty of Passing Light, but Suspends Sentence.

Miss Ramsay N. E. Nevitt, daughter of Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt, who last week announced the inability of the "You and Me" Taxicab Co. to make a suitable return on the investment and therefore asked its legal discontinuance, nearly battled her way through a traffic charge in Police Court.

She was haled before Judge Gus A. Schuldt on a charge of disobeying a signal light, and she stoutly maintained that the light was amber when she passed. However, she was found guilty, sentence was suspended, and her personal bonds were taken.

Miss Nevitt was the directing genius behind the "You and Me" Cab Co. She employed only women drivers.

Liquor Suspect Held After Chase by Police

Entering a plea of not guilty to a charge of transportation of 100 gallons of alleged alcohol, Samuel Glasser, of Baltimore, Md., was ordered held for the action of the grand jury in Police Court. He was released on $2,000 bond.

Glasser was arrested after Sergt. George Little and Policeman G. C. Deyoe had followed his car from Maryland into the District. The tag number on his car, recognized by the policemen, led to the officers' action.

LINK OVER I STREET TO HAVE 2-WAY RUN

Section Between Sixteenth and Fourteenth to Be Affected by Change.

Upon recommendation of Traffic Director W. H. Harland, the District Commissioners yesterday approved an amendment to the traffic regulations providing that two-way traffic shall be restored to I street between Fourteenth and Sixteenth streets northwest.

This change, which will not become effective until an additional signal light is installed on the northwest corner of west Fifteenth and I streets, will open I street to two-way traffic from Fourteenth street west, but will retain the restriction to eastbound traffic east to Massachusetts avenue.

When this section of I street was made a one-way street, it was explained, the traffic condition at the intersection with Vermont avenue was complicated by parking of cars in the middle of Vermont avenue. This parking since has been prohibited.

One-hour parking space in the vicinity of the new Center Market, Fifth and K streets northwest, was enlarged in another amendment. The streets surround the market.

Parking was ordered prohibited on Bancroft place between Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets, on the south side, and on Buchanan street between Fourteenth street and Arkansas avenue. The first ban was recommended because of the narrowness of the street, while the second was suggested because the street is used by the Washington Rapid Transit Co. and trucks and creates a traffic hazard, especially for the Fire Department, which uses the street on a regular run.

Wife in Divorce Plea Spurns Alimony Clause

Mrs. Stelle Beatrice Eddy, of California street near Eighteenth street northwest, yesterday sued for a limited divorce without alimony. She also requests the court to prevent her husband from molesting her, charging he forced his way into her apartment recently to harass her.

She declared in her petition that she did not know whether or not her husband, John Adrian Eddy, was employed. She said that she was able to take care of herself and did not desire any alimony.

Sleuth Assaulted In Gambling Raid

Two Men Held as Police Break Into Rooms Near Printing Office.

In a raid on an alleged gambling establishment near the Government Printing Office, Detective F. O. Brass is said to have been assaulted by the alleged proprietor when he attempted to seize alleged betting slips and race charts for evidence.

Fred K. Jawish, 34 years old, of G street, near North Capitol, was charged with assault and permitting gaming, and Joseph N. Paulad, 44 years old, was charged with permitting gaming. Detective Brass with Detectives C. D. Champ, J. K. Baker and F. M. McVearray, broke into the place, which is located over a delicatessen store.

3-Year Sentence Given Transporter of Liquor

One of the stiffest sentences ever imposed in the District for a violation of the liquor laws was handed down by Justice Oscar R. Luhring yesterday when he ordered James Williams, Negro, to serve three years in the penitentiary and pay a fine of $100 when he was found guilty of transporting liquor.

Williams had been arrested by police after a chase January 29. His automobile upset and he eluded the pursuing officers, only to be caught a short time later. In his car, police testified, they found 59 half-gallon jars of liquor. William's car overturned in an alley near Fourth street and New York avenue northwest, United States Attorney James F. Hughes said.

BALTIMORE BANDITS SOUGHT IN DISTRICT

Trio Believed to Have Come to Capital Following $1,338 Holdup.

District police were asked to be on the alert for three armed bandits who yesterday held up an employe of the Regal Laundry Co. in Baltimore and robbed him of $1,338.33 in cash and an untotaled amount in checks. The bandit car bore District tags.

Local police informed the Baltimore authorities that the tags had been issued to Virginia Williams, of New York avenue, near North Capitol street, whose automobile was reported stolen three days ago.

The hold-up occurred under the Pennsylvania Railroad viaduct, near Franklin and Bentalou streets, when Vincent D. Rudolph, a bookkeeper for the laundry, was on his way to the Western National Bank with the daily deposit.

Two men, wearing caps, demanded the satchel he carried, which Rudolph surrendered. Nearby the police found an abandoned automobile, which is believed to be a Washington car, and a foreman of a gang of workmen found a set of District tags, listed to Mrs. Williams.

After taking the money the two men jumped into an automobile which was cruising behind them and got away. Police believe that the men took a train to Washington after the hold-up.

Hains Point Contract For Speedboats Is Let

Award of a three-year concession to the Downtown Parking Garage, for exclusive speedboat privileges at Hains Point, Potomac Park, was announced yesterday by the office of public buildings and public parks of the Capital. The concession will open tomorrow.

Monte de la Vega, formerly with the Potomac Speedboat Corporation, which operated the concession last year, will be in charge as operation manager. Four Dee Wite speedboats will be in service, capable of a speed of 45 miles an houn, he stated. Charles H. Gardiner is general manager of the Downtown Parking Garage, awarded the concession.

3 Youths Are Arrested In $400 Store Theft

Three colored youths were arrested yesterday a few hours after burglars broke into a clothing store at 621 Seventh street and stole $400 worth of clothing. Police recovered all of the clothing. The three prisoners confessed to the robbery, police say.

Those arrested are: James Bankhead, 19, of Sixth street, near M street northwest, and Lenwood Booker, 17 years old, of V street, near Ninth street. William McCoy, 19, of Seventh street, near P street, was later arrested. All are held at the Sixth Precinct Police Station.

$770,000 Stewart Will Administration Asked

An estate of more than $770,000 was left by Mrs. Margaret G. Stewart, who died February 6, the District Supreme Court was told yesterday. She left no will, according to her daughters, Mary E. Stewart and Helen S. Devore, who asked the court to grant them letters of administration.

The estate included premises at 2002 and 2200 Massachusetts avenue northwest, in addition to other property valued at more than $600,000, the court was told.

2 Sewer Job Awards Are Let by Commission

Contracts for construction of two sewer jobs were awarded yesterday by the District Commissioners on bids totaling more than $4,000. Both went to Frank J. Rose

The Wade road service sewer, between Sumner road and the U. S. Insane Asylum grounds, will cost $2,825.75, while the service sewers in the vicinity of Meade street and Fifty-first place northeast will cost $1,327.75.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

SPEAKING ABOUT THE WEATHER.

WHAT to do about the weather seems to be the outstanding world problem at the present moment. From all parts of the globe come reports of climatic upsets.

• • • •

Venice has had its canals frozen over, all Europe has had record storms and floods, Florida has been so cold the tourists have been strolling under windswept palms in raccoon coats, and some of the Northern States like Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York have had the mildest winter in years. It's all done with mirrors.

• • • •

When Venetian gondoliers are seen paddling up the canal with snow on their whiskers, when skid-chain salesmen report a business boom along the French Riviera, when even Palm Beach Chamber of Commerce officials sleep under Army blankets and when New Yorkers pass an entire winter without an outside chance of a snow shoveling scandal, the weather becomes something meriting an investigation.

• • • •

• • • •

Weather forecasters, never dependable even when things are running in accordance with custom and precedent, are now reeling groggily around in a state of complete helplessness, but refusing to waive immunity on the ground a man can't be compelled to testify to his own incompetence during a state of climatic chaos.

• • • •

Tourists who go South for the winter no longer know whether to pack white flannels, straw hats and one-piece suits or tippets, snowshoes, hot-water bottles and hockey sticks.

• • • •

THE weary automobile traveler is as apt to find snowdrifts in Savannah as in Hoboken. The man who flees Boston to escape the influenza may wind up at St. Petersburg with his feet frozen. The couple who quit Chicago, Schenectady or Detroit to dodge Jack Frost may discover him hopping from limb to limb among the coconut trees of the tropics.

• • • •

Nothing is certain except that tomorrow's weather will be louder and crazier.

• • • •

New York City, which ordinarily has snowbanks still lingering in the side streets by the middle of March, hasn't had a snowfall big enough to give a single snow removal foreman a fresh start in life.

• • • •

On the other hand, the weather in many of our winter resorts would have reminded Calvin Coolidge of the boyhood winters on his Vermont farm.

• • • •

• • • •

For tomorrow: Unsettled in all portions with increasing surprises and fresh brisk atmospherical upsets, followed by rising complaints and brisk business in all doctors' offices.

THE NATIONAL SPIRIT.

THERE ain't no use
New laws to make—
We've got more now
Than we can break.
Cincinnati Enquirer.

• • • •

But cheer up, men—
Success to crime!
We'll break 'em all
If given time.

NEWSPAPER FANCY.

SOMEWHERE beyond men's visions
Still do the presses whir,
Putting to bed the papers—
Printing the Worlds that were.

Some place where time means nothing,
Some place where gold means less,
There is an Old Guard working
Putting them all to press.

Some place where things are lasting,
Pulitzer sits—and Cobb,
Under a dome still golden,
Doing the daily job.

Some place where all's enduring,
Look! And behold a wraith
Running his treasured papers—
Keeping the pledge and faith.

WARDMAN RECEIVER IS TO BE APPOINTED

Attorneys in Case to Confer at Noon Today to Name Custodian.

A receiver for the Wardman Mortgage & Discount Corporation was granted yesterday morning by Judge William P. Woolls of the Corporation Court in Alexandria, Va., at the end of a hearing extending over seven weeks.

The action was taken on a petition filed October 14 by a minority group of stockholders charging fraud, mismanagement and collusion in a suit brought against the corporation and Harry Wardman, Thomas P. Bones and James D. Hobbs.

Judge Woolls handed down the decision orally in the presence of Harry F Kennedy, attorney for the minority group, listed as Robert B. Smythe, Theodore S. Grape and Charles D. Davis, and in the presence of Gardner L. Boothe, Virginia statutory agent of the corporation, a Virginia company. Judge Woolls merely said that the court had heard sufficient evidence to warrant appointment of the receiver.

Attorneys in the case are to confer at noon today in an effort to agree on a receiver. In case of disagreement the court will name a man.

Mr. Kennedy after the decision made public that he would ask Equity Court here to appoint a receiver to take charge of any possible assets of the corporation in Washington.

According to evidence presented at the hearings, the only assets of the corporation in Virginia are 8,320 shares of Wardman Realty & Construction Co. nonvoting preferred stock.

PADLOCKS ORDERED ON THREE PREMISES

Justice Luhring Cuts Docket to Nine Cases; Barber Shop Is Closed.

The docket of pending "padlock injunctions" in the office of Capt. Harold W. Orcutt, in charge of the Government's crusade against alleged bootlegging places here, was reduced to nine last night, when Justice Oscar R. Luhring handed down two padlock injunctions against three separate pieces of real estate.

The premises at 919 D street northwest were ordered padlocked for four months, and the second floor of premises at 913 D street northwest was ordered padlocked for one year. James Hunter, William Hunter, Walter Hunter, William H. Yarborough and Joseph Robert Donaldson were mentioned in the injunction handed down by the justice at the request of Capt. Orcutt. Florence Ida Callamer, as trustee for the estate of Mary E. France, was also mentioned in the injunction.

In the findings Justice Luhring declared that the second floor of 913 D street was used as a drinking room. It was equipped with a barricaded door, which had a peep hole and a hidden electric buzzer. In the 913 D street case the owners of record of the property are Mary A. Gatti, Joseph D. Gatti, Rose Gatti, Jennie M. Anselmo and Louise Anne Anselmo.

In his second padlock injunction Justice Luhring closed for a period of four months a barber shop on the first floor of the premises at 1246 Wisconsin avenue northwest and a shed in the rear. The tenant, George Thomas Harper, and Hilda Wise, the owner of record of the premises, were the ones named in the findings.

The case against Harper originated in October, 1926. The crowded docket in Equity Court resulted in the case being brought to trial at such a delayed time.

Man Gets 120-Day Term On Different Charges

George Baker, Negro, 34 years old, was given 120 days in which to ponder over the general futility of resisting arrest yesterday when charges of assault, driving without a permit and defective lights were placed against him in Police Court.

Policeman Anthony Richitt testified that he arrested Baker at Fourth and N streets northwest, and that the Negro resisted arrest. A radio car was sent to the scene when some one telephoned police that there was trouble at the intersection. The sentence was 90 days for assault, 25 days for no permit and 5 days for defective lights.

Former Page to Beg High Court to Save Man's Life

(United Press.)

Mr. Reilly, who spent five years behind the Supreme Court bench attending to the small needs of the justices, is seeking to save the life of a Negro pauper.

Alfred Scott Aldridge, the Negro, was sentenced to die in the electric chair after he was found guilty by a jury of the slaying of Harry J. McDonald here. At the trial Mr. Reilly, who was appointed to serve as Aldridge's attorney without pay, asked the trial judge to inquire of the jurors whether they had any prejudice against the Negro race. The judge refused.

On this point the Supreme Court granted the review.

Supreme Court Clerk Charles Elmore Cropley remembers Reilly as a page. "Jimmy Reilly," he says. "Sure, I remember him. He was the little freckle-faced Irish boy."

MRS. WHOLEAN ASKS ESTOPPAL OF COURT

A motion to strike out certain parts of the answer to Mrs. Mary F. Henderson to the suit which sought to prevent her from donating to the United States Government a palatial home for the use of the Vice President of the United States was made yesterday by Mrs. Beatrice Henderson Wholean, adopted daughter of the aged and socially prominent widow of the late Senator John B. Henderson.

The motion, made to Justice Jesse C. Adkins, was taken under advisement. At the same time, hearing on the motion of Mrs. Wholean to dismiss the suit brought by Mrs. Henderson to void her adoption was postponed.

In her motion, Mrs. Wholean said that the question of whether or not she was the daughter of Mrs. Henderson had no bearing in the suit. She said also that the claim of Mrs. Henderson that she had made a $300,000 gift to her adopted daughter had no bearing on the matter before the court.

Attorney George E. Edelin, for Mrs. Henderson, asserted that both these questions were pertinent to the suit by Mrs. Henderson and he asked that they be considered by the court.

The wrangle between Mrs. Henderson and Mrs. Wholean was brought to the attention of the court when Mrs. Wholean first sought legal action to estop Mrs. Henderson from giving to the Government a residence for the use of the current Vice President of the United States. That suit resulted in developments that showed Mrs. Wholean as an adopted daughter, and not as a blood descendant, of John B. Henderson, jr., the son of Mrs. Mary F. Henderson, who is the widow of the late Senator John B. Henderson.

Baker's Union Protests Baltimore Importations

A meeting in protest of the alleged "importation" of bread from Baltimore will be held under auspices of the Bakers' Union tonight at the Typographical Temple, 423 G street northwest. The Bakery Salesmen's Union has already framed a protest.

R. C. Lester, business manager of the salesmen's group, said shipment of bread from Baltimore here "means less work and consequently less pay for 1,500 workers in Washington." He said the Baltimore bread is made in a nonunion factory, and its "importation" is hostile to the unionized bakery industry.

Sentences of 90 Days Follow Oranges' Theft

Theft of a crate of oranges yesterday resulted in two Negroes being sentenced to serve 90 days in jail on charges of petty larceny.

George R. Hawkins and Charles R. Henderson are the two. The oranges were recovered in a lunchroom on Fifth street northwest, where Henderson was working. The name of George R. Hawkins, with an address on I street, was found written on the crate, and that, Hawkins said, got there when he absent-mindedly scribbled on the crate while he was awaiting an order in the lunchroom.

The Chief Executive, who recently issued a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to observe Pan-American day on April 14, is expected to discuss the significance of the day.
